U. S. Proposes. NO Says France.
Gov. Smith's Prescription.
Woman's Devotion.
No More Champions.
—By Arthur Brisbane

PRESIDENT HOOVER yesterday proposed cutting world armaments one-third, and read his suggestion to newspapermen in the White House with Secretary of State Stimson looking him.

That plan would save about fifteen billion dollars during the next ten years. But it can't be done. France immediately says NO. She has what she wants and knows that the way to keep what she has is to be prepared to defend it.

Senator Borah, head of foreign affairs, approves the President's proposal. Prime Minister Herriot of France says it is "entirely unacceptable." Sir John Simon, for England, demands that the use of submarines be abolished. England owns a great floating commerce.

Our foreign friends will probably force upon us the wise course, which is to provide for this country such protection as it needs without consulting foreigners.

The right fighting air and submarine fleets, constantly strengthened and improved, would make us indifferent to opinions or moods of other nations. And such modern protection need not cost nearly as much as we spend on inadequate protection now.

Former Gov. Smith, asked whether he would bolt the Democratic party if Gov. Roosevelt were nominated, replies: "Why go into that now?" His prescription for Democratic victory is this: "Write an honest, straightforward platform, and nominate me."

There is no doubt that Gov. Smith is a candidate on his own account.

Impressive is woman's devotion. When Von Plehve, Russian statesman, was killed by a Nihilist bomb, the wife of a French attache, "who had conceived a violent passion for Von Plehve," wept for weeks because she had not been killed with him.

And you know about the Roman matron. When her husband was ordered by the judges to commit suicide, and lacked courage, she seized the dagger and to encourage him, plunged it into her own heart, saying: "It does not hurt."

And now, in New York city, comes a model for all wives. She lives on Fifth ave., near the Central Park Zoological Gardens, and her husband's sleep is disturbed by a great lion's roaring. The lady appeared before Park Commissioner Herrick, saying:

"Name your own price on that lion and I will buy it. I want to let my husband have the satisfaction of shooting it."

No sale.

Seventy thousand high-spirited Americans, including governors of states, mayors of great cities, charming ladies, watched the Sharkey-Schmeling prize fight on Tuesday, paying from $2.30 to $23 (reduced prices in honor of the depression) for their seats—$429,000 was the total amount paid for the pleasure of watching two men fight through 15 rounds of three minutes each.

Schmeling had won the time before on a foul. Good business was the "50-50" idea demanded that Sharkey should win this time, thus insuring big receipts for the NEXT fight. Mayor Walker, on the radio, told Berlin that Schmeling, German, should have had the decision. Experts confirm that.

Neither man really won, for neither was strong enough to injure seriously anyone but a woman or child. The late John L. Sullivan, before he decided to beat the champion of champions, ALCOHOL, would have disposed of Sharkey and Schmeling in the same evening, with a maximum of two or three rounds apiece. Bob Fitzsimmons, a professional fighter, not a professional talker, would have taught those two gentlemen a great deal about finish astronomy, and would have beaten either of them easily.

But a population in which brutality survives, into adult life, must be content with an imitation championship, since there are no champions available.

Many Americans were among visitors in Dublin attending the Eucharistic Congress opening. The spirit of reverence was apparent, proven in the streets kissed the hem of the robe of the Pope's personal representative as he passed.

The Catholic Church is an ancient institution that endures, patient, far-seeing. Early in this century, the German chancellor, Von Bulow, was told by the Italian prime minister, Giolitti, that the visit of the French prime minister to Rome and the Italian King, "completely ignoring the Vatican," settled for all time any possibility of the Pope's regaining temporal power, or any rulership in a temporal domain.

But that temporal power is regained and temporal rule in Vatican City exists today. Pope Pius, whom Von Bulow describes as a quiet, peaceful

LIVES PERILED IN $1,000,000 FIRE RUIN

Steel Framework Crashes After Victory Plant Blaze; Flames Laid to Smoker

While new fires broke out in the ruins of the Squantum Victor plant today, two of four boards of inquiry agreed that careless smoking "probably" led to the $1,000,000 blaze.

The announcement came from Fire Chief Sandrs of Quincy and Fire Inspectors John B. Reardon, Edward Murtagh and Frederick Mansfield of the State fire marshal's office.

Quincy police investigators and a naval board of inquiry, composed of Lieut.-Comdr. John N. Laycock, Lieut.-Comdr. Charles R. Johnson and Lieut. W. S. Button, said "opinions are not completed."

RUINS PERIL FIGHTERS

The ruins were placed under marine rule by the Navy Department with orders to clear the scene of all but officials and firemen.

A separate investigation was underway by Quincy police into a fire on an unnamed yacht that broke out 20 yards from the main blaze.

Firemen and investigating officials were endangered during today's investigations when 200 feet of steel framework toppled 60 feet from the top of the burned plant. Other sections were ordered torn down.

One of the bricker fires that kindled anew today was aboard

The Problem

The Remedy

THE $5,000,000,000 National Prosperity Bond Issue would put millions of idle men to work, start the wheels of industry humming and make railway passengers out of many thousands of our people in the Metropolitan District of Boston who now stay at home because they have no work to which to travel back and forth.

Scandal Charges in Title Go Rock Nation; Experts Still Argue

AFTER THE BATTLE
Max, unmarked and smiling, is deluged with congratulations, even though losing his title on questionable decision.

DID JACK SHARKEY win the world's heavyweight championship on an unjust decision? Was Max Schmeling entitled to the verdict as the millions of the listeners on the radio were led to believe? Was the German robbed of a deserved triumph, as his manager, Joe Jacobs, sent sizzling over the air immediately after the fight and since then repeatedly reiterated? Boston writers and Boston fans returning from the Big Fight almost were practically unanimous in declaring that the Squire of Chestnut Hill was entitled to the award. But hundreds of others who saw the fight disagree.

A wave of outspoken indignation and resentment at the manner in which Schmeling was deprived of the world's heavyweight championship by Sharkey has swept over the entire country and broke in New York with a violence that will not abate for some time to come.

The astounding decision, carried by radio, cable and telegraph wires to all parts of the world, bright a response in the form of a deluge of sympathetic messages to the dethroned champion from hundreds of persons unknown to him.

Many Protests on Decision Roll In

Other wires and cables were directed to the Madison Square Garden management and boxing officials, protesting against the recognition of Sharkey as champion and demanding that the German fighter be given an immediate return match.

The fight and its amazing climax were hotly discussed on every street corner in the land, in homes clubs, offices and other places where two or more persons gathered.

Many of the partisans — and Sharkey was not without his supporters—had witnessed the bout. Those who did not attend were swayed by their reactions to the radio account which was broadcast on the N. B. C.'s latest fight network and so spread the argument that was heard throughout the land. In smaller measure, depending on the size of the community, the same sentiments were reflected that made New York seethe with fight talk.

No Free Ice Cream, Candy for the Fourth

There will be no free ice cream and lollypops for Boston children on the Fourth of July., Mayor Curley decided today in ordering expenses of the municipal celebration reduced from $28,000 to $10,000.

The city spent $14,000 on the ice cream and candy last year, but this year it will use $10,000 for fireworks and band concerts and not one cent for goodies.

The mayor designated Prof. Robert E. Rogers of M. I. T., the Boston Evening American's famous columnist, to be the orator at Faneuil Hall exercises. Ward celebrations will be omitted, but there will be fireworks and music at five points, Boston Common, Franklin Field, South Boston Strandway, World War Memorial Park in East Boston and at some Brighton playground yet to be selected.

MYSTERY IN 'L' MAN'S DEATH

Pending an autopsy by Dr. Timothy Leary, medical examiner, mystery surrounded the death today of Christopher C. Parker, 71, El conductor, of 363 Massachusetts ave, South End, whose body was found near his home.

Parker's head was between the pickets of an iron fence and the rest of his body lying across the sidewalk when he was discovered by John H. Conley, taxi driver, of Sullivan st., Randolph, who was passing with two passengers.

Conley and his fare took the body to the hospital, believing the aged man might still be alive.

Police of East Dedham at station were told by Miss Mary Smith of Garland st., South End, that she was in Chester Park at about the time Parker's body was found, and that a short time before she had seen a man walking at about the same spot.

A few seconds later, she said, she looked in the same direction but did not see the man. She thought nothing of it, however, she declared, believing he had gone into a basement apartment.

GUARD SHARKEY FROM FANS

Being a world champion is swell —up to a certain point— e Jack Sharkey finally realized today in deciding to telephone his friend, Police Chief Michael T. Hughes of Newton.

The new champion asked Chief Hughes, who incidentally was at the fight in Long Island City Tuesday night, if he would assign a policeman to keep away the persistent army of autograph and photograph seekers besieging the Sharkey home at Chestnut Hill.

Not only throughout the day, but throughout the night, declared Sharkey, the autograph and photograph seekers have been ringing the Sharkey bell, over-running the grounds and refusing to leave.

Chief Hughes sent two men.

"Both men in front turned and levelled guns at me. A shot went by my ear and I could feel it burn. They began climbing over the seat and I grappled with them. I grabbed a gun and shot both of them."

Dramatically today, in Superior court, Jack "Kid" Berger told his own story of the shooting on the night of Jan. 14, when Harry Wolen was killed in a car at Main st. and Pleasant pk. rd., Winthrop, and Arthur Vallucci was dangerously wounded.

Berger, who also was shot and who nearly died from a bullet in his abdomen, is on trial charged with the second degree murder of Wolen, of Boston and New York, and with assault with intent to kill Vallucci, whose home is in New York.

The shooting occurred, according to Berger's story, while the three men were supposedly bound for a garage in Winthrop, where they intended hijacking a load of liquor so that Wolen could pay back money he owed Berger.

He and Wolen had been in difficulties over a debt of $1275 owed him by Wolen, the defendant testi-

The Land of the Free and The Home of the Brave

—A Catechism—By W. R. HEARST—

WHAT is going on in Chicago next week?

Some gentlemen are going to convene there who call themselves Democrats.

What do you mean,—"call themselves Democrats?" Aren't they Democrats?

Well, they are going to begin by repudiating the rule of the majority, which is the fundamental principle of democracy everywhere.

Aren't these gentlemen in Chicago going to carry out the will of the people?

Not if it finds expression in a majority for any one candidate.

Well, how are candidates nominated in this so-called Democratic convention?

Unless there is an absolute two-thirds majority, a minority can hold out and prevent the nomination of any candidate favored by a majority of the people.

BUT isn't the Democratic party supposed to represent the people?

It is.

And isn't the Democratic party supposed to be controlled by a popular majority?

It is.

But isn't a Democratic convention really controlled by an obstructive minority?

It is.

Well, who elects a majority of the delegates?

Just the plain people.

Well, who controls the obstructive minority?

The high financiers.

Uhum! Well, who, then, will nominate the candidate of the Democratic party?

The high financiers.

Who has nominated the candidate of the Republican party?

The high financiers.

Then who will control the next President?

The high financiers.

* * *

THEN what kind of a Republic is this?

It's that kind of a Republic.

And what kind of Democrats are assembling in Chicago?

Just that kind of Democrats.

And what kind of Republicans assembled in Chicago a week ago?

The same kind of Republicans.

Gosh! Why don't we have genuine popular government? Wouldn't that be good for the country?

We don't know. We have never tried it of late years.

Is government by high finance good for the country?

You ought to know just how good it is. You are living in this country.

Anyhow, maybe the people like government by high finance.

Well, if they like this kind of thing, then this is the kind of thing they like.

* * *

WHAT has high finance done to make it popular, if it is popular?

Everybody.

I mean what policies has it pursued?

It has put the savings of our American people into worthless foreign securities.

Well, that's something.

Yeah, and it has put into its own worthless securities the trust funds of widows and orphans.

CHIEF CURRY FOR BAKER AS DARK HORSE

Tammany Leader Declared to Have Picked Ohioan in Chicago Race

Today's developments in the pre-convention activities of the Democrats were:

1—Announcement that the New York Tammany delegates will hold a week-end caucus to decide whom they shall back as a presidential nominee spurred Roosevelt supporters to activity for abrogation of the two-thirds rule. John F. Curry, Tammany chieftain, was reported maneuvering to back Newton D Baker of Ohio as "dark horse" for the presidential nomination.

2—Albany says Roosevelt managers hope for the small delegation of 94 from New York, the 36 votes of Missouri and many of the 58 from Illinois to put him over on the second or third ballot.

3—Ex-Gov. Alfred E. Smith, realizing he is in the fight of his life, is striving, first, to gain a nomination, and, failing that, to force the convention to choose some man outside at New York, determined at all costs to defeat Roosevelt.

4—Senator Huey Long of Louisiana, breaking away from the traditional policy of the South, is leading the fight to abolish the two-thirds rule for presidential nominations.

5—Ex-Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock of Nebraska, a Roosevelt supporter, picked for chairman of the resolutions committee, has a difficult job in the prospective fights over prohibition, tariff and unemployment planks.

Chicago, June 23—Newton D. Baker of Ohio, Secretary of War in the Wilson administration, privately is Tammany Chieftain John F. Curry's choice for the Democratic presidential nomination, but publicly the New York city boss has not revealed his choice.

This was learned today from sources close to the Tammany leader as he prepared to engage in a round of conferences which Tammany is confident will result in the elimination of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, former Governor Al Smith and all the other avowed candidates, and pave the way for Baker as the "dark horse."

HOOVER ARMS CUT PLAN CALLED ELECTION MOVE

FRENCH PRESS TERMS SCHEME DEMAGOGY

Germans Hail Proposal, but It Meets Cool Reception From Britain and Japan

(By The Associated Press)

Officials and newspapers in the principal European countries today generally greeted President Hoover's plan for general arms cuts, announced suddenly yesterday, with more or less favor.

The French papers, however, almost universally condemned it as "demagogy" and as an electioneering move.

The widely read Petit Parisien, of Paris, said if it had been submitted last February "together with the French constructive plan, it would have elicted only applause, but today it appears as a piece of extreme demagogy and an electoral maneuver."

GERMANY HAILS PLAN

German newspapers, however, lauded the proposal as courageous and hailed it as the most significant international step since the declaration of the one-year moratorium on reparations and debt payments.

"It is the most powerful contribution to peace and welfare since the war," the industrialist Allgemeins Zeitung said.

"Sensible nations must now unite and let France go on in the path of isolation," the Boersen Zeitung of Berlin said.

At Madrid, Premier Manuel Azana said the proposals "dovetail with the Spanish republic's often-repeated desires for world peace."

The proposals created a sensation in the British press. The general attitude among the cabinet ministers remaining in London was the "anyhow, things are moving." George Lansbury, leader of the Labor opposition, lauded the proposals.

NAVY ATTACKS PROPOSAL

The Press Association at London, however, quoted "a naval authority" as saying he did not think the plan "for one moment practicable" and that it had no chance of acceptance by the great powers "even if Hoover waves a big stick and refuses to consider debt reductions should his plan fail."

The proposals surprised the Japanese government at Tokio, and the news was prominently displayed in the newspapers, with President Hoover's picture. The foreign office spokesman said the details disclosed by the press dispatches were "drastic and far-reaching" but it was impossible to discuss them without careful study.

WOULD KEEP BOMBERS.

Japanese naval authorities intimated that Japan probably would be ready to support the abolition of chemical warfare, aerial bombardment of cities and reduction of aircraft carriers, although they doubted the advisability of abolishing aerial bombers.

The drastic cuts in capital ships and cruisers proposed by the President certainly would be opposed, they said.

Japanese military officials appeared skeptical of the practicability of the proposals and said they considered them as impractical as Soviet Russia's proposal for total abolition of armaments.

They said they were inclined to doubt President Hoover's sincerity and considered his plan primarily intended to court favor in the presidential election.

Conversations with high officials of the foreign office, the army and the navy produced the impression today that Japan is likely to follow the lead of France in dealing with President Hoover's proposals.

DEMAND SECURITY

A high civilian official expressed sentiments which were echoed by the fighting services when he said that "our first requirement, like that of the French, is security. As things stand today the great masses of China and Russia adjoin our frontiers and armaments are our only guarantee of security."

U. S. Refuses Security Pact Demand of France

Washington, June 23 (AP)—Insistence by the French Government on a security pact, reported in dispatches from Geneva concerning President Hoover's arms slash plan, brought the assertion today in high governmental quarters that the United States under no conditions would consider entering such an agreement.

President Hoover and Secretary Stimson conferred on the matter today. Later Stimson said the French Government, reported as cold to the suggestion, was "apparently warming up to it."

O'Hare said that Mrs. Putnam will be met at the airport or at the station by a reception committee and escorted through the streets in the usual fashion to the Copley-Plaza, where the city will give her an informal luncheon.

Democratic Seats Plan Protested

Chicago, June 23 (AP)—One Democrat thinks the methods of distributing spectators' seats to his party's convention are undemocratic.

He is Municipal Judge Donald S. McKinley and he has protested to John J. Raskob, national committee chairman.

The time limit for original contributors to the convention guarantee fund for first choice on seats has expired and the citizens' committee headed by Edward N. Hurley is filling requests in the order they and the cash are received.

Judge McKinley fears galleries and boxes will be filled with Republicans since they "are supposed to be the wealthier class."

SPITALE, BITZ SLATED TO DIE

New York, June 23 (INS)—Salvators Spitale and Irving Bitz, underworld emissaries of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh in the fruitless search for his kidnaped baby, were slated to be bumped off with Vannie Higgins, Brooklyn rumrunner king.

Police today received information that the killing of Higgins was part of a triangular murder plot of New Jersey rum runners who suspected Higgins, Spitale and Bitz of hijacking liquor on the coast.

The triple assassination plan outrivaled the St. Valentine massacre of a squad of gangsters in Chicago and the baby-killing raid in New York attributed by police to the mob of the late Vincent "Babyface" Coll.

The three-on-a-spot program called for killing Higgins, Spitale and Bitz as the came out of a dance recital in which the daughters of Higgins and Spitale were participating.

The orders were to "get" the trio, regardless of women an children in the crowd, according to police.

Higgins was shot down virtually in the midst of his family as he came out of the building.

Spitale, questioned by police today, said he believed he and Bitz unwittingly escaped the gunmen because they left earlier than Higgins and took a taxicab instead of Spitale's automobile.

TWO BILLION AID BILL READY TO PASS SENATE

Wagner Measure, Carrying Half-Billion for Public Works, Is Slated for Approval

Washington, June 23 (INS)—The $2,000,000,000 Wagner relief bill, designed to relieve distress and stimulate employment, was slated to pass the Senate today.

The measure had been carried close to final passage in a 13-hour session which broke up early this morning when "tired Senators protested they were being driven beyond the limit of physical endurance to make possible early adjournment of Congress.

The major provisions of the bill, including a $500,000,000 bond issue for public works to provide jobs and $1,500,000,000 for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to be loaned to self-liquidating state and semi-public enterprises, had survived all attacks.

WOULD PAY TEACHERS

When the Senate prepared to resume debate on the measure today, a quick decision was expected on an amendment of Sen. Harrison (D) of Miss., authorizing $200,000,000 in loans to states for educational and hospital purposes.

Under the provision, Harrison said, cities like Chicago could obtain relief for unpaid school teachers.

An amendment of Senator Lewis (D.) of Illinois, permitting the Reconstruction Finance Corp. through states to make loans to cities, was rejected. This provision was designed to relieve the Chicago situation.

Senator Wagner (D.) of New York was optimistic over the chances of passing the measure today.

MOSES' ATTACK FAILS

When the Senate, 57 to 19, rejected an amendment of Senator Moses (R.) of New Hampshire to remove the $500,000,000 bond issue from the bill, passage of the measure with the public works provision in it was assured.

Since the Wagner bill is an amendment to the Garner program which passed the House, a conference will chose between the half billion dollar public work bond issue in the Senate measure and the $1,200,000,000 provided in the Garner program.

5½ BILLION SOUGHT

Senator LaFollette (R.), of Wisconsin made a vigorous fight for a $5,000,000,000 bond issue to inaugurate a public works program big enough to break the depression. It was defeated 56 to 12.

Before final passage, it was expected a provision authorizing $2,000,000,000 in loans to states for unemployment relief would be approved. This fund was provided in a separate bill which passed the Senate but which has been held up in the House.

The Senate rejected the attempt of Senator Trammel (D.) of Florida to raise the bonus issue again.

McADOO SEES VICTORY FOR GARNER

Ex-Secretary, in Chicago, Is Sure Texan Will Be Next Party Head

By SEYMOUR BERKSON

Chicago, June 23—We're going to a victory with Garner."

Thus, William Gibbs McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury, sounded the battle-cry of the Democratic cohorts massing to back Speaker John N. Garner of Texas for the party's logical compromise candidate for the presidency of the United States.

The late Woodrow Wilson's son-in-law, chairman of the California delegation pledged "to the limit" for Garner and one of democracy's outstanding leaders, arrived here in his private plane yesterday to join the generals of the Garner-for-President campaign.

Commenting on the campaign map with which Gov. Franklin D Roosevelt of New York is claiming 691 of the 770 delegates required for the Democratic nomination, McAdoo said:

"It's a pretty looking map but I remember in 1912 Champ Clark went into the Democratic convention with the same kind of a picture but he never was nominated. On the other hand, in 1914, John W. Davis went into the Democratic convention with only 38 votes but he was nominated.

"You see, it isn't what you go into the convention with. It's what you come out with at the end."

MAYBE then the Democrats think that favoring high finance is the way to get their candidate elected.

Well, that policy didn't get Cox elected.

And it didn't get Davis elected.

And it didn't get Smith elected.

Well, what does high finance get out of the Democratic party?

It gets its candidates nominated but not elected.

Then the high financiers are not as smart as I thought they were.

No, they are smarter.

How so?

They get their candidate elected in the Republican party.

Well, what do the Democrats get out of all this?

What they deserve.

And what do the people get out of it?

Oratory.

Then what are the people going to do about it?

Grin and bear it.

Well, who runs this country anyhow?

High finance.

Who controls high finance?

A Wall Street gentleman who is the fiscal agent of the British Empire.

Well, where is the land of the free and the home of the brave that we hear so much about?

In the national anthem.

Governor Roosevelt of New York is investigating an interesting trip made by the notorious New York gangster, "Vannie" Higgins, and three of his associates to the great Meadow State prison just before Higgins was killed by other gangsters.

Higgins went to the prison by airplane, was welcomed by a prison guard, who spread out a sheet to show the pilot where to land, and the gangster spent the night in the warden's house as his guest. Governor Roosevelt will want to know a good deal about that interesting reception.

One cheerful note in the day's news. More gold has been found in the Alaska Nuka district, 70 miles west of Seward, and an old-fashioned gold stampede has been started.

"Discovery of free gold ore, estimated to run $35,000 a ton," is the announcement.

Discovery of gold in California in 1849 killed off a depression. Discovery of Klondike gold helped to kill another depression.

Perhaps this Alaska discovery will give our country the "gold cure" that it needs, after a debauch of war and stock gambling.

The Dies bill, passed by the House, sent to the Senate, makes membership in the Communist party or affiliated labor unions and organizations a deportable offense, and any alien teaching or advocating Communism doctrine can be deported. The National Committee for the Defense of Political Prisoners protests violently, in the names of the Postess Edna St. Vincent Millay, Theodore Dreiser and Lincoln Steffens and others, on the theory that men should be deported or otherwise punished for what they DO, not for what they THINK OR BELIEVE. Once you were put in prison if you believed and taught that the earth was round.

Hutton Declares Evangelist and His Mother, Not Himself, Are on Trial

Los Angeles, June 23 (AP)—Defense attorneys today hoped to present to a jury more details of the "past life" of Myrtle Joan St. Pierre, twice-married, 30-year-old nurse, who seeks $200,000 from David Hutton for alleged breach of promise.

To the aid of the choir singer, husband of Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton, evangelist, they have summoned several men, whom the pretty nurse admitted she knew.

NER MANY NAMES

Steadfastly trying to pick flaws in her story that Hutton betrayed her under promise of marriage, the defense met opposition on each of the "past life" questions from Miss St. Pierre's attorneys.

"I have a right to defend my character," Miss St. Pierre shrieked, and burst into tears, temporarily interrupting the cross-examination.

Miss St. Pierre admitted, under questioning of defense counsel, she was born "Myrtle St. Peters" and that she had used the names of "Jean Deville," "Hazel" and "Joan," as well as the two previous marriage names, Mrs. H. H. Harrington, Jr., and Mrs. George Street. Her testimony frequently was interrupted by heated clashes between attorneys.

MOTHER IN COLLAPSE

"They're not trying David Hutton in this case," Hutton told friends during the court recess. "They're trying poor Aimee herself, who lies flat on her back in a hospital. And they're crucifying David Hutton's mother as well. Mother has collapsed because of the case."

Mrs. Aimee Hutton is in a sanitarium suffering from a nervous breakdown. So serious is her illness, she was told that the trial had been postponed.

OLD SHIP FIRM IN BANKRUPTCY

Mrs. Ruby Adams Story, widow of Arthur Dana Story, designer and builder of many of the crack Gloucester fishing schooners, has was president and treasurer of the Gloucester Yard, Inc., filed on behalf of that concern a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in federal court, listing liabilities of $56,582.85 and assets of $18,834.

The principal creditor of the concern is the estate of Mrs. Story's husband, with a claim for money loaned amounting to $21,928.63 and notes totalling $19,979.

Unsecured claims total $27,550.48.

2 FACE ARREST IN AID FRAUD

Cambridge police warfare on persons fraudulently receiving aid from the board of public welfare moved into the police court today.

The initial move toward arrests was made by Inspector Joseph P. Breen when he secured warrants in East Cambridge district court for Richard Lucas and his wife, Mary, of Regent st., North Cambridge, charging each with larceny of $100 from the welfare board. The couple will be arrested today, according to Inspector Breen and will be arraigned in court tomorrow.

According to police, Lucas and his wife received $9 per week since April 1 from the welfare board. Police charged that all during that time Lucas has been employed by a Kendall sq., tire company at a weekly salary of $31.50.

Today's action by the police is the first active step in the drive ordered by Mayor Russell against persons getting aid from the city who are not in need. Three police officers, Joseph P. reen, John J. Barrett and Michael C. Normile, have been assigned to investigate all cases and checkup on persons on the welfare rolls.

CALLES' WIFE IS OPERATED ON

An operation for removal of a tumor from the brain of Leonor Florente Calles, wife of the former president of Mexico, was performed at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital today by Dr. Harvey Cushing.

The young patient, who was brought from Mexico City for examination by the brain specialist, went under the knife at 10 a. m. Several hours must elapse before any announcement of the outcome is made, it was said at the hospital.

In the operating room with Dr. Cushing was Dr. Francis Mirenda of Mexico City, the Calles family physician. All other members of the Calles party, including the former president, remained at their hotel awaiting word.

MARY WARD OFF FOR CHICAGO

The first of the Massachusetts delegates pledged for Al Smith left Boston for Chicago today—a woman.

She is Miss Mary Ward of Jamaica Plain, and as she stepped on the train at the South Station, the North Shore Limited departing at 10:25 a. m., she declared confidently that Smith would emerge from the convention as the Democratic candidate for President.

Her early departure was because she is one of the 16 persons from Massachusetts in the "Minute Men Group" for Smith, who will hold a meeting in Chicago tomorrow night.

"I am convinced," said Miss Ward, as she left Boston, alone, "that the Massachusetts delegation will stand solidly behind Al Smith. I am convinced that the entire party will finally get behind him and that he will be returned as the Democratic presidential candidate."

PAPAL LEGATE TO OFFICIATE AT SERVICE

Radio System Will Carry the Voices of Huge Organization to Assembled Multitude

Dublin, June 23 (AP)—Masses in military formation before the high altar in Phoenix Park, a quarter of a million men will lift their voices under the stars tonight in one of the most inspiring moments of the Eucharistic Congress.

It will beatrictly an affair for men only. The singing will be led by a special choir of men and carried to the vast congregation through a microphone system.

Cardinal Lauri, the papal legate, will preside at the meeting, and at its conclusion will pass among the battalions.

A solemn pontifical high mass at 12:30 a. m. and another at 11 o'clock this morning were the religious high spots of today's program.

CANADIANS IN SESSION

But the thousands of visitors spent a busy day with meetings for each nationality and general meetings at which the theme was the doctrine of the eucharist—the bodily presence of Christ in the blessed sacrament—which is the central foundation of the Eucharistic Congress.

Tomorrow's arrangements include a pontifical high mass, more sectional meetings, and a great mass meeting for women in the evening.

Under the chairmanship of Rt. Rev. J. T. McNally, bishop of Hamilton, Ont., the Canadian prelates and priests here for the congress today held the first of their two sectional meetings.

The principal address was delivered by Rev. Father M. Cline of Toronto. His paper was entitled "The Blessed Eucharist: the Lighthouse of Ireland," and traced the development of Irish Catholicism and its effect on the rest of the world through Irish migration down the years.

IRISH LEAD WORLD

A pontifical high mass celebrated by Rt. Rev. T. O'Donnell, archbishop of Halifax, preceded the Canadian meeting.

"It is easy to understand," said Father Cline, "why the Irish Catholics at home and abroad are the foremost church-goers in the world. The stream of Irish migration to the United States and to the sister dominions has had a moral influence upon these countries as beneficient as an ocean current."

The Papal Legate was the guest of James McNeill, governor-general of the Irish Free State, with the remainder of the Cardinals attending the Congress, at a dinner at the Viceregal Lodge. Ministers and plenipotentiaries of other countries, including the German and French charge d'affaires, John McCormack, former President William T. Cosgrave and G. K. Chesterton, distinguished author, attended. The Legate was given a general salute by a guard of honor on his arrival.

B. E. F. IN FAVOR OF LOAN PLAN

Chicago, June 23 (INS)—The Bonus Expeditionary Force now encamped in Washington, D. C., believes that the depression would have been beaten if the Congress of the United States had enacted the $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan proposal into law.

Harold Barnes Foulkro, chairman of the expedition's legislative committee made this declaration in a radio broadcast over Station WJJD last night.

Foulkro said:

"William Randolph Hearst, whose loyalty to the veterans of all wars has been demonstrated in the news and editorial columns of his many papers, repeatedly has endorsed the $5,000,000,000 prosperity bond issue.

"We also shall insist that the Democratic party adopt a plank in its platform placing the party on record for immediate payment of the adjusted service certificates held by World War veterans.

"More than 85 per cent of the Bonus Expeditionary Force are married men, 75 per cent are overseas veterans with combat service. Two hundred and seven hold the highest military decorations.

"We are going to ask the Democratic resolutions committee to include a plank giving real preference to all veterans for city, county, state and federal positions regardless of political party."

Pope Orders All Churches to Stop Sale of Holy Candles

Rome, June 23 (AP)—The sale of candles in churches of the diocese of Rome, for burning before altars, is forbidden by a decree issued today by the Pope's vicar-general, Cardinal Marchetti Selvaggiani. It becomes effective July 1.

The decree, which abolishes a long-established practice in the church, is part of a series of reforms to be put into effect by the vicar-general. Since the diocese of Rome is the mother diocese of the church, it was expected the rule would be applied elsewhere.

"One mass well heard, one communion well received, will obtain more heavenly graces than thousands of candles lighted every day," the cardinal said. He added that the practice of using candles in the present way "can easily take on the appearance of superstition."

The use of candles before the altars, in accordance with the custom, is not changed by the decree, but they must be bought elsewhere.

Other decrees by the cardinal ordered better care of tabernacles and forbade the use of artificial flowers and the photographing of sacred functions in the churches.

Boat Speed Increased Without Power by Skimming Device

New Haven, June 22 (AP)—A method of nearly doubling the speed of water craft up to 50 feet in length by reducing resistance instead of increasing power was reported today to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, meeting at Yale.

Dr. Oskar G. Tietjens, Westinghouse research engineer, exhibited a model equipped with two steam-lined planes having cross sections similar to those of airplane wings, by which the craft is raised out of the water.

Practical use of these planes, he believes, will enable a motor boat capable of 25 miles an hour to go 40 miles an hour with no more power. He considers outboard motors particularly suitable for the new craft.

ONLY HOME THEY HAVE--IT'S BONUS CAMP

Here is just one example of desperation in the ranks of Uncle Sam's World War veterans, many of whom have brought their families to the national capital with them to await relief through payment of the soldiers' bonus. Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Wilmer of Lancaster, Pa., are shown with their five children in the city of nearly 20,000 people that is taking shape at Camp Marks on the Anacostia flats. The young child is 13 months old and the oldest is but 11. The Wilmers say they have no home, no food, and no place to go.

Vets in Answer Bare Hoover Broken Word

By Elsie Robnson

Author of "Listen World"

Washington, June 23 (INS)—This is an open letter.

It is written in reply to hundreds of letters arriving daily concerning the bonus marchers. Nine out of ten of those letters are friendly. But the unfriendly writers are equally sincere and their questions are important.

"What right," say they, "have these men to march? They have already received half their bonus and agreed to wait for the rest until 1945. Why don't they keep their bargain? This march isn't fair. They are forgetting the other unemployed. They think only of themselves and are trying to take advantage of their country in her darkest hour."

Here is the answer of the B. E. F. to these comments:

"Yes, we made a bargain. We made it when we were already up against it. Most of us had been up against it since we came back from the war.

"You know the promise that was made us before we went—to give our jobs back when we returned. And you know what really happened. Our positions were filled by the families and friends of those who stayed behind.

Hoover's Empty Pledge of Better Times Ahead

"Well, that was that. We struggled on. Things got fierce. We went to our convention, to ask for our bonus, and President Hoover appealed to our patriotism. He said it would be disloyal to take all our bonus then . . . . said if we'd wait, he'd guarantee times would change. So we agreed to take half.

"But nothing was done. Things went from bad to worse. By the middle of last summer, every man was broke. Most of us starving. No jobs anywhere. The President knew it—but he wouldn't even call an extra session of Congress.

"THAT'S WHY WE'RE HERE. WE'D HAVE KEPT FAITH WITH HIM IF HE HAD KEPT FAITH WITH US. WE'VE COME BECAUSE WE HAVENT ANY OTHER PLACE TO GO.

"We don't really prefer to cash our certificates now. We'd rather have jobs and keep our certificates for a stake later. But what can we do? Where are the jobs?

"And now they call us bullies and traitors—say we're trying to hold up the country. Look at the way they've treated us. Refused us shelter and food. Intended we were Reds. Circulated stories that we had dynamite. Refused to let us march past the White House.

Rich Who Get U. S. Aid Not Called Traitors

"Go up town. Look at the best hotels. They're full of bankers and railroad men who've come to ask help from the government AND ARE GETTING IT. Nobody calls them traitors. Nobody says they're holding up the country.

"Those men, in normal times, wouldn't have any right to ask federal aid. But this is an emergency. Everyone understands that—about them. Why can't they understand it about us?

"IF RAILROADS SHOULD BE KEPT GOING, SHOULD CITIZENS? WHO HAS THE BETTER RIGHT TO ASK FOR HELP—THEY OR WE?

"Now they're trying to make people believe that we're leaving because the bonus bill was killed. It isn't true. We're not leaving. We're here to stay—and thousands more are coming in.

"AND WE AREN'T SITTING IDLE. THERE IS ONE THING OUR ENEMIES HAVE FORGOTTEN. WE'VE LOST OUR HOMES AND OUR JOBS AND OUR FOOD AND OUR CLOTHES—BUT WE HAVENT LOST OUR VOTES. WE AREN'T MEN WITHOUT A COUNTRY. WE SAVED THIS COUNTRY. WE'VE A VOICE IN RUNNING THIS COUNTRY, AND NOVEMBER'S COMING. THEY WON'T HEAR US IN CONGRESS OR THE WHITE HOUSE. BUT THEY'LL HEAR US AT THE POLLS."

There's an honest answer to an honest question.

Consider it well, stranger. You're reading history.

MILLION DOLLAR LOSS IN VICTORY PLANT BLAZE

Two of a score of injured firemen were still under treatment today. Lieut. John Byron of the Woodsteon station at Quincy City Hospital and Engineman Patrick Stanton of the Central station at Reynolds Hospital, West Quincy.

The flames broke out from some undetermined cause shortly after the daily rush to the South Shore started and the pall of smoke created could be seen all over Greater Boston, attracting thousands to the scene. Hundreds of cars jammed the roads leading to Squantum.

The blaze started at the south end of a wooden pier on the west side of the plant and a southwest wind drove the flames directly into the building. When firemen arrived they found the water shut off and were delayed getting started.

FIREBOAT JOINS STRUGGLE

By the time they, with the help of Boston apparatus, had succeeded in getting water on the blaze, it had gained considerable headway. But for the aid of the fireboat Matthew Boyle, the fire would have caused much more damage.

A score of yachts in the western part of the building were destroyed. These included the $250,000 cruiser Amjesa, the yacht Sheila, valued at $200,000; the cruiser Ithasca, of Mrs. Marion H. Hollis, of Boston; the houseboat Onana, the ketch Haze, C. Crawford Bolidge's Bloonis, the tenders and gear of Louis K. Liggett's cruiser Ambier and several other small craft.

Several other vessels were saved by the efforts of student flyers at the Squantum naval plane base.

The firemen were hampered by the explosions of paint and fuel aboard the various burning vessels and by falling of beams and debris from the building.

Four men aboard the yacht Sheila were just preparing to go out when the fire broke out. The fire swept in under the pilings and as the four men tried to warp the vessel out of the slip, swept aboard. She took fire almost immediately and flames exploded her three fuel storage tanks, spreading blazing oil over the nearby pier and vessels.

Capt. A. C. McLeod, the skipper, Edward Whiting, Albert Domenico and John Butkins leaped from the blazing ship and swam ashore. A short time later the vessel sank.

VICTORY PLANT IS PREY OF FLAMES

Adjacent buildings were in constant danger from the flames which raced through the Victory plant at Squantum built by the government during the World War. It was here that many destroyers were turned out, to be rushed into immediate service. This photo was made from airplane at height of fire. (Staff photo.) Other Picture on Page 2

2 ROB STORE IN WEST END

After they politely opened the door to allow a customer to walk out, two gunmen entered a chain store in Myrtle st., West End, today and took $50.

Patrick Fogarty of Prentiss st., Roxbury, manager of the store, and Ernest Toppi of Garden Court st., North End, the clerk, were ordered to face a wall.

One of the bandits covered Fogarty and Toppi while the other took the money from the till.

Fewer Wellesley Girls Married

That Wellesley College students apparently failed to give much time to Cupid the past year, with but three of the 318 graduates being married, one divorced, and 34 announcing their engagements during the school year. Previously, about 30 members of the class left college in the four-year period to marry.

SEARCH FOR 2 ON SUNKEN BOAT

Work of raising the sunken water boat America at Fiske wharf and the search for the bodies of two men, believed drowned, was resumed at low tide today.

Reports that Carl Carlson, missing watchman, was seen walking along Hanover st, North End, after the accident, were doubted by Capt Roscoe Perry of the harbor police. The identity of the second man believed lost is unknown.

Officials of the Boston Harbor Water Co. said the America would probably be raised within a week. They believe that a hole had been punctured in the bow of the boat, causing it to sink.

113 to Get Degrees

Brunswick, Me., June 23—Bowdoin College will gain 113 alumni when degrees are awarded at commencement today.

FOUR SAVED AS BOAT UPSETS

Coast Guards of the City Point station made a dramatic rescue of four South Boston boys today as the boys clung to their rowboat, which capsized a mile and a half from shore.

The lookout at the station saw the accident and Chief Officer Frank E. Holbrook took out two launches, which arrived just in time to save the smallest boy who was exhausted and about to let go.

The rescued are Harry McDonough, 15, son of John D. McDonough of Firehouse 44, of 22 M st.; Francis Devine, 15, of the same address; Edward LaPointe, 16, of 112 Marine rd., and Charles John, 11, of 212 Marine rd.

U. S. Court Orders Schooner Forfeited

Judge Elisha H. Brewster of U. S. District Court has ordered the forfeiture of the fishing schooner Mary, captured by the Coast Guard November 5, 1931, after a fusillade of shots had been fired at her in Boston harbor. The owner of record is John Brown of Walkhill st., Dorchester.

Handbag Snatchers Get $30 in Brookline

Two handbag snatchers attacked Mrs. Fannie M. Sloan of Pratt st., Beachmont, and Mrs. Ruth Golden of Gibbs st., Brookline, in Beal st., Brookline, last night, and seized a bag containing $30 from Mrs. Sloan.

CANNON HEADS NEW DRY FIGHT

Chicago, June 23 (AP)—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., fighting prohibition leader, says the allied dry forces are as willing "as the wettest of the wet to have the people speak on prohibition."

Arriving here yesterday en route to Iowa, the Methodist Episcopal (South) Church official announced the drys would make as determined a fight for a straight enforcement plank at the Democratic convention as they did at the Republican.

"Then we will take it to the country," he declared, and the results, he said, will be "surprising."

"You will find," the Bishop declared, "that the country isn't controlled by the wet states and that the folks back home will have something to say."

He plans to return to Chicago for the convention.

Consumer-Congress Is Suggested by Pope

Vatican City, June 20 (AP)—Pope Pius today received 400 delegates of the International Breadmaking Congress and told them there ought to be a congress of consumers to draw useful lessons from the relation between production and consumption.

The relation, he pointed out, is so important yet so obscure that it "constitutes one of the principal causes of the crisis that troubles the world."

Democrats Fill Opera Void, Says Gibbons

By Floyd Gibbons

(Copyright, 1932, by International News Service)

Chicago, June 23 (INS)—Hello, everybody. And did you hear—they're sparring in the center of the ring—yes, socker—they are trading lefts—light lefts—that dance in and out like rapiers—a left to the face and a right to the body and one, two and they are against the ropes—but fighting and fighting gamely.

Just like the Schmelly-Sharking shell-out, the Democratic family row of 1932 is getting going out here on the shores of peaceful Lake Mich. The boys and girls of the party that adopted Thomas Jefferson and was adopted by Will Rogers, are dropping off the trans and saying things—mostly nasty.

Several days ago, all the Demmykrats of all breeds and spellings said all the nasty things they could think of about the Republican convention, the team of Herb and Charlie and the bone-dry repeal plank. They used up all that matter in a couple of days and now they have started on one another.

Chicago Has Its Own Woes Right Now

In these last days before the big fight starts, there are two places for Democrats to say things. One is upon departing the home town. Just before taking the trainmille out they let go an embarkation philippic, aimed at their pet peeve in the party.

The other place is upon arrival in Chicago. Just as the Democrats step off the train, they unbutton another wallop at the gent they describe as the only solitary figure standing in the way of Democratic victory in November.

Chicago isn't taking the convention seriously yet. Chicago has troubles of its own. The city made the school teachers work without pay and the mayor led a pay army—a pay expeditionary force—to Washington to dig up the money.

Why Worry About Opera With Conventions There?

The bonus army down there, more or less, has the same idea. And the Italian tenors and the Swedish nightingales, the Chicago teachers and the unemployed, unpaid veterans are alike in that respect. The opera singers refused to sing unless they were paid.

Wise song birds. That shows their foreign training. No dough, no sing. So Chicago will have to worry along this year without opera.

But from the way the anvil chorus among the Democrats has already begun, there's a strong prospect that the Democratic convention Follies will make up for the loss.

We'll see. Or, at least, we'll hear. Anyhow, Socker—they're sparring in the center of the ring! Oh, boy, what will the decision be in this fight?

BERGER TELLS HOW WOLEN WAS SLAIN

fied, and when the ride to Winthrop started, Wolen claimed he could get part of the money in that town.

HAD A SPEAKEASY

Berger revealed that his real name is Harry Schottenfeld but that he is known better as Jack Berger, the name he used when he was an amateur boxer six or seven years ago.

He became acquainted with Wolen two and a half years ago in Boston, and knew him first as Harry Brown. Berger then had been in Boston a little more than six years and had worked as a shoe salesman and in a Washington st. delicatessen.

Q.—What were your business connections with Wolen? A.—Well, Harry and I had a speakeasy on Columbus ave., near Dartmouth st.

Berger said they had the speakeasy about nine months and then police raided it and closed it last summer.

Their business arrangements were broken off with the raid, Berger testified, but Berger saw Wolen several times afterwards in a vain attempt to collect $1275 he said Wolen owed him. Wolen always said he was short of money but would pay some time, according to the witness.

DEBT REPUDIATED

Q.—Was there any time he refused? A.—Yes. Three months after the place closed I met him and said, 'Well, Harry, I'm kind of broke and I'd like to have some of that money you owe me.' Wolen said, 'What money? We're even.' I said, 'What do you mean, we're even? You owe me over $1000.' Wolen said, 'Why you were in on that hijacking job on the Cape, weren't you?' I said, 'What hijacking job down on what Cape?' He said, 'Go ask your friend Cohen.' Then he walked away.

The two met finally on January 14, Berger testified, and he was introduced by Wolen to Vallucci.

"Harry said," the witness testified, "'well Jack, I've been kind of hard on you. Forget what I said about the hijacking on the Cape. If I can get the money I'll give it to you. I'm going to see a party and I think I can get some of it.'"

They made an appointment for 6 p. m., and met at that hour. Wolen said he knew where there was a truckload of liquor and they could hijack it. Berger replied, he testified, that he wanted nothing to do with that particularly. He was chiefly interested in getting his money.

Berger got in the back seat of Wolen's car, with Vallucci beside Wolen, who was driving, and they started for Winthrop, the witness declared.

On the ride Wolen "kept winding in and out of the main road," Berger declared.

..."He kept humming to himself and looking at me in the mirror in a funny way," Berger testified. "I said to him, 'You're not taking me for a ride, are you? Let me out of here!' Harry said, 'You're crazy.' I said, 'I think you're out to kill me, both of you. Harry—do you know where you're going?' He said, 'Of course I do. We're going to take that stuff in that garage. It's supposed to go out at 11 o'clock.' I said, 'I think you're going to kill me. Let me out! I want to go back to Boston!'"

Berger testified that Wolen stepped on the accelerator and then swung suddenly into a side street in Winthrop, so wildly that Berger cried out, Watch out, Harry, We're tipping over!"

FIGHT FOR LIFE

"He stopped the car with a jar," testified Berger, "and both of them in the front seat turned and pointed guns at me. A shot went by my ear. I could feel it burn and Vallucci began climbing over the seat, and then Harry.

"I grabbed a gun and shot both of them."

Q.—How many shots were fired? A.—There were so many it sounded like machine-gun fire. I felt a stinging in my stomach, fell or was pushed out of the car, but when he got up off the pavement he found he was holding a pearl-handle revolver in his hand, by the barrel.

Q.—What was your state of mind while you were grappling with them? A.—I was fighting to save my life.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your unhappy-and-glad feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

Is it any wonder you feel punk?

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get them two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1932 Co. W. Co.

Goat Tests Reveal Cure for Nervous Breakdowns

Syracuse, N. Y., June 23 (AP)—Goats with "synthetic" nervous breakdowns are finding relief in a new hormone intended for strictly human use. The discovery was reported to the American Association for the Advancement of Science today.

Other goats, which eat transparent wrapping paper in place of hay, were exhibited as in perfect health without even goat nerves. They illustrated a different discovery, promising better foods for man.

Dr. Frank A. Hartman of the University of Buffalo reported the nerve tonic. Drs. Liddell and Anderson of Cornell co-operated with Dr. Hartman.

The remedy is cortin, a hormone secreted by the adrenal glands of men and animals. It recently saved the lives of several persons dying from Addison's disease.

The goats, so nervous their bodies trembled, were quieted quickly by small injections of cortin. The relief was "striking." It lasted four or five days. After that hormone became less effective.

The experiment offers a method of identifying the weak spot where nervous breakdowns originate. Dr. Hartman said the experiments indicate the possibility of reaching the all important cortex of the brain directly with a medicinal substance. He said cortin also increased feelings of affection in some human experiments.

Jewish Charities Left $7000 in Will

Bequests of $7000 were left Jewish organizations in the will of Abraham Rosenberg of Brookline, allowed today in Dedham court. The Hebrew Free Loan Society of Massachusetts was given $5000, the Federated Jewish Charities $1000, the Jewish Home for Aged and Orphans at Worcester and Hebrew Ladies' Moshav Zekainin Association of Boston $500 each.

The balance of the estate, value not estimated, was left Mrs. Fannie Rosenberg, the widow.

NEW SOUTHERN COMET FOUND

Discovery of a new comet in the southern sky was announced today by Harvard Observatory officials, who were apprised of it in a cablegram from the central office of the European and Asiatic Discoveries at Copenhagen.

The comet is of magnitude 10 and was sighted early yesterday by an observer named Geddes, according to J. M. Baldwin, government astronomer at Melbourne, Australia, who sent word of it to the Copenhagen office.

He located it as follows: Right ascension, 9 h., 15 m.; declination south 34 degrees, 37 minutes.

DO YOU INHALE?

Millions say we hit the "nail on the head" when we asked this question!

OKAY AMERICA! . . . you wanted the facts and we've given them to you—even though the truth has shocked the cigarette trade! Inhaling is the very core of all cigarette discussion.

For we all inhale—knowingly or unknowingly . . . every smoker breathes in some part of the smoke he or she draws out of a cigarette.

Do you inhale? Let other cigarettes keep an embarrassed silence if they will! Lucky Strike can openly raise the issue. Luckies assure you the protection you want . . . because certain impurities concealed in even the finest, mildest tobacco leaves are removed by that famous purifying process. HIT BY TRAIN HE THINKS LOWELL COLD TOWN

Lowell, June 23—Allan Woods, 42, a bewhiskered knight of the road from Iron Mountain, Mich., opined from a cot in St. John's Hospital today that this is a very inhospitable community, indeed.

"Not only does the court order me out of town," he said, "but when I don't move fast enough they hit me with a train."

Yesterday he was given 24 hours to leave the community after being arrested for riding the rods of a freight. Early this morning, with Thomas Pearson, 52, of Wilkes Barre, Pa., he was obeying the order, walking the railroad tracks near North Chelmsford, when the north-bound Bar Harbor Express hit him, all was painfully but not seriously hurt.

"It is not true," said Mr. Woods, "that I was trying to thumb a ride on the express. I was making good time and would have been out of trouble before the 24 hours expired. And now, here I am in bed and I can't get out of town for several days and I have no doubt—no doubt at all—but what they'll jail me for not obeying the court order."

His companion, Mr. Pearson, paused at the accident scene only long enough to get Mr. Woods to the hospital. He, too, was under court order to be on his way.

"I must be going," said he. "Alas, I cannot tarry. Whither, I cannot say, but they'll not hit me with any trains if I can help it."

WINS DEMOCRAT CROWN

BOOKS—and a Number of Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

Any great city is always full of unfinished stories—as O. Henry so well knew. Coming to New York, he had but to look down on the pageant of life that daily passed his window to realize this; and his tales are sprinkled with the pathos and humor of the eternal panorama of our town. But mostly the pathos, the tragedy.

How do certain incidents which we witness in the hurry of our days end? A street brawl, for instance, that we have not the time to see to its finish.

Once, just as I was boarding a street car long ago, I saw a man brutally strike a woman who had been meekly following him and pleading with him on a lonely thoroughfare. He left in mind our own business in a city as vast as New York, and perhaps it is just as well.

But the sound of that blow and the glimpse of the woman accepting it, and afterward following her man in submission and anguish, remain in my memory to this day. I shall never know their unhappy story, but it does not require much imagination to realize what it must have been.

Not long ago a foul murder was committed in one of our fashionable side streets.

An old butler, answering the ringing of a bell, opened the door and was shot in the heart by his unknown visitor. No one was ever discovered the reason for the crime or the identity of the criminal. It is simply another of those unsolved mysteries which baffle police and public alike.

But there is another sad side to such an incident. I happened to walk through that street a week or so later. An old building was being torn down almost directly opposite the house where the deed had been done, and a group of workmen were singing as they handed planks down from one floor to another.

One of them—an Italian happened to open his lunch as I passed; and the paper containing it was a tabloir, and I could not help seeing a picture of the old butler, despite the fact that his photographed countenance was now smeared with butter and crumbs. And the Italian began to eat ravenously, as he threw away the wrapping.

A shop girl with her best beau went by. They were evidently whispering sweet nothings to each other, happy, no doubt, that their lives were going on, oblivious that there were such things as death and murder in the world.

Two nursemaids gossiped as they guarded their charges, lying serene in sleep in their carriages; and not far away a French poodle pranced in front of his mistress and did a particularly blithe step when he came in front of No. 27, where the murder had been accomplished.

A taxi drew up at No. 30, and a smartly-dressed man and woman stepped out, never turning their heads to glance at No. 27, though, no doubt, they had been as absorbed as I only a few brief days before in the printed account of the crime. Not only the poor butler, but the house, with a closeup of the front door, had been photographed in all the papers; but it was like so many other facades in any block in this district that there was nothing distinctive about it. Just another town house with curtained windows. And, I thought, just another murdered man whom the hurrying citizens quickly forgot after the first shock of reading of his fate was over.

But one shouldn't sentimentalize too much. All that could be done had been done, evidently, to solve this puzzle; and there would have been no sense in standing before that house and wondering.

Life has to go on. One's own affairs, new buildings, babies, dogs, lovers, a luncheon across the way—it is all a never-ending cinema, a street scene.

And as in the Elmer Rice play, new tenants must come to take up their lives in the same apartment where a similar murder had been committed. We can't brood long over what has been. There is too much else to think of, too much to do.

And yet I wish there could be some special corner in every morning paper where we could learn what happened after certain events occurred—a sort of department, called possibly "Follow-Up News," that would keep us informed as to the outcome of dramatic happenings. A clearing house that cleared up the manifold mysteries that surround us.

For big towns are only small towns grown up, after all. And most of us are humanly curious mortals, who like definite endings to the stories we read.

And so I wish I could tell you if that butler's murderer was ever captured and sent to the electric chair. I'm sorry that I can't.

(Copyright, 1932.)

QUEEN CHOSEN IN DORCHESTER

Miss Betty Grady, 19, of Dorchester, was chosen from a field of more than 400 contestants as "Miss Democracy for 1932" last night at the first annual dance of the 12th Congressional District Democratic Club at the Dorchester Plaza.

Morgan T. Ryan, registrar of motor vehicles, and Patrick T. Connolly, president fo the Dorchester Board of Trade, were judges. The presentation of a loving cup to Miss Grady was made by Councillor Francis E. Kelly.

Proceeds of the affair will be turned over to Kelly to help defray the expenses of the delegates who leave this week for the National Democratic Convention.

Beethoven's Baggy Trousers Cause Row

Los Angeles, June 23 (AP)—The question of whether Beethoven wore baggy trousers while composing some of his immortal symphonies may have to be settled officially.

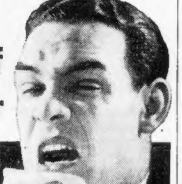
A statue, now nearing completion, at the hands of a Glendale sculptor shows Beethoven with baggy ones. The park commission, which must approve it, doesn't care for the trousers.

Odd Fellows Home Opened

Concord, N. H., June 23—Before an audience of more than 5000, the new $125,000 home of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows was dedicated here.

REPULSIVE!

to use your handkerchief over and over



USE KLEENEX and destroy at once!

EVER stop to think how repulsive a handkerchief is, once it's used?

It certainly is nothing you want to carry back to your face. It's not even fit to put in a laundry bag—where it contaminates other clothing.

It's incredible to think that anyone could choose to use a handkerchief, now that Kleenex is sold everywhere—at a price so reasonable that it actually costs less than laundering!

'KERFS ...reuse when you want something dressier than Kleenex! Smart borders make Kerfs attractive enough for tea napkins as well as handkerchiefs.

Kleenex is a disposable tissue that is rapidly replacing handkerchiefs altogether. Highly absorbent . . . soft downy . . . sanitary . . . economical . . . really superior in every way to handkerchiefs of cloth. Very convenient, too—you simply destroy after using. No self-infection, during a cold or hay-fever.

Kleenex is ideal for children. Also for removing cold cream and cosmetics.

KLEENEX disposable TISSUES

Germ-filled handkerchiefs are a menace to society!

SCORES KILLED BY TIDAL WAVE

Mexico City, June 23 (AP)—Mexican relief agencies were concentrated today on the task of alleviating the sufferings of thousands of people in towns along the West coast which were virtually wiped out yesterday by a tidal wave that took a toll of more than 40 lives.

Colima reported 62 injured, but it could not be determined how many lives were lost.

Governor Salvador Saucedo of the State of Colima said the death toll at Cuyutlan, a resort town, had passed 40 with additional persons missing and more than 100 injured. The wave was preceded by sharp earthquake shocks.

A relief train evacuated 1400 persons from the town.

The Governor said the tidal wave swept inland for more than a mile over an 18-mile front, leveling everything in its path.

ADELE ASTAIRE WILL MAKE HER COURT DEBUT

London, June 23 (AP)—Adele Astaire, former Broadway musical comedy star, will be presented tonight or tomorrow night to the King and Queen, but the name the Lord Chamberlain will call out as she enters will be Lady Cavendish.

The Omaha girl who danced to stardom with her brother, Fred, is making her court debut as the bride of Lord Charles Cavendish, who was one of England's most eligible young bachelors.

TOUR DELAYED AFFAIR

Usually the wives of the younger sons of dukes are presented at the first court after marriage. Both of the two courts this year have occurred since the wedding, May 9, but Lord and Lady Cavendish were making a wedding tour of the continent.

Ten other American women will be presented tonight by Mme. De Fleuriau, wife of the French ambassador. One is the former Kathryn Bache, now Mrs. Gilbert Miller, wife of the New York and London theatrical producer.

Others to be presented tonight are:

Miss Anne Bissell of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Miss Joan Diehl of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Miss Marjorie Sawyer Goodman of Chicago; Mrs. Herbert S. Howard of Buffalo, N. Y.; Miss Kathleen Knox of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Thurston Macauley of Atlanta; Mrs. Gilbert Miller of New York; Miss Patricia Tobin of San Francisco, and Mrs. Nion Tucker of Burlingame, Cal.

Those to be presented by Mme. De Fleuriau tomorrow are:

Miss Louise De M. Dewey of Chicago, Mrs. Eben S. Draper of Hopedale, Mass.; Mrs. John J. Fitzpatrick of Somerset, Ky.; Mrs. K. Paul Ramsay of Las Vegas, N. M.; Mrs. Alexander Johnston Robertson of New York; Mrs. W. Alex Spencer of Topeka, Kan.; Mrs. James G. Wentz of Washington, D. C.; and Miss Jeanne Wingfield of Reno, Nev.

Rich Alaska Gold Find Made; Men Told to Bring Food

Seward, Alaska, June 23 (AP)—Following reports of extremely rich gold findings in the Nabu district, 70 miles west of here, came a warning today against prospectors going into the district without ample food supplies.

Thomas Babcock, who made the strike, said:

"Prospectors had better come grubstaked for the summer, at least, and be prepared to leave in the winter unless they have supplies."

He held out no hopes for increased employment because of the strike, and attempted to discourage any northward trek of unemployed from the States.

Meanwhile, several hundred miles to the east, interest centered in unconfirmed reports of rich placer gold finds in the Llard River district of Southern British Columbia. Many prospectors were reported waiting at Atlin and Carcoss, B. C., to go into the country.

1500 GATHER FOR VET CAMP

Plymouth, June 23—Fifteen hundred delegates began gathering in this storied spot today for the annual encampments of the Massachusetts Department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Auxiliary.

They brought word of a spirited contest for the post of state commander.

Paul W. Pate of Brookline, and George Farrell of West Springfield, are the leading candidates, and each has numerous supporters.

Preliminary meetings were in progress during the day.

EXCITING MEETING LOOMS

With politics, the depression, the bonus, prohibition and a dozen other subjects to talk about, the encampments are expected to be more than ordinarily exciting.

A banquet at the Hotel Samoset tonight will formally open the proceedings and allow campaign managers and their candidates to size up the field.

Maj. Andrew Carr, commander of Alexander Scammell Post, will be the toastmaster, and the Chamber of Commerce and town government will have representatives present.

Mary T. Grennan of rBookline, state head of the auxiliary, said she expected at least 744 delegates, and the department itself is expecting 800 men.

BUSINESS SESSIONS TO OPEN

Business sessions will open at 10 a. m. tomorrow, Department Commander Cornelius W. Cronin of Somerville will preside. There will be a dance tomorrow night.

One of the features of the gathering will be the memorial service Saturday at 2 p. m. Mayor Curley, Lieut. Gov. Youngman and distinguished army and navy men will be guests at a reception to follow.

Wales Now 38, Takes Tally; Likes Onions and Tripe

London, June 23 (AP)—Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, celebrated his 38th birthday today, still the world's most eligible bachelor.

In contrast with recent birthdays, when his schedule of work and engagements has been followed as usual, he decided to take a day off today and read the thousands of congratulatory messages from all corners of the world.

The last two or three days the Prince has been much in the public eye and the eye of the straw hat industry in Bedfordshire. He has appeared in a straw "boater" and as a result the industry, hereto somewhat moribund in England, has begun to perk up.

It is a busy year he left behind him when he awoke this morning to realize he was 38.

During it he has taken up motor boating, made a hole in one, been badly shaken up in an automobile accident, become a book collector, taken up cycling, led the world in the wearing of berets, lost two barns on his Canadian ranch by fire, suffered several days' illness from a chill and got a new dog to replace his superannuated one.

Last Christmas Wales played Sant Claus at a party attended by all members of his household staff and their families.

He also became a football fan, wore a spotted tie that was much copied in London, decided to become gymnastic instructor for his two young nephews, admitted he was not much adverse to publicity and opened the new Shakespeare Memorial Theater at Stratford-on-Avon.

A London restaurant chef revealed he is fond of tripe and onions. The Prince announced he doesn't like strangers to follow him on golf courses. He expressed sympathy for the unemployed and pleaded for bettering of the deplorable conditions in the British industrial districts.

He represented Great Britain at the funeral of President Paul Doumer of France, acted as guide to a group of tourists in London, sent a life guard's uniform to a little boy who had been brave, and had a radio installed in his plane.

GERMANY MAY JOIN FRANCE

Lausanne, June 23 (INS)—Chancellor Franz von Papen's conception of a Franco-German political and military alliance as the way to an economic union and security for Europe, as first divulged by International News Service yesterday, has advanced faster than anticipated.

Von Papen, it was learned this afternoon, made his proposal to the French within the last 24 hours. The idea, considered too new to be taken seriously in French circles a few days ago, is beginning to gain advocates, who see in it the opportunity of removing the chief cause of European friction.

Meanwhile, a compromise between British and French views on reparations or abandonment of the subject temporarily is expected before the week-end, when von Papen and Premier Herriot return to Berlin and Paris.

Pianist Is Needed for the Orchestra at State Prison

There's three meals a day, lodging, little pay, but watchful care, for a good piano player.

The job may be steady or temporary, according to the player.

It's at state prison in Charlestown.

Out of 906 prisoners, Warden James L. Hogsett said today, he is without a pianist to officiate at church services and concerts within the walls.

Richard H. Tuson, former Boston Latin school teacher, officiated well until yesterday, but he was paroled after 21 months of a three to four year sentence for a hit-and-run accident.

Hogsett admitted that some of his prisoners play a piano, but none good enough to do justice in the prison orchestra.

Sunken Ship Yields $1,000,000 in Treasure

Brest, France, June 23 (AP)—Thirty ingots of gold, valued at $1,000,000, were stowed in the salvage barge Antigio II today as divers, with renewed vigor, dropped into the sea to fish for the rest of the $5,000,000 which went down with the liner Egypt ten years ago.

Shake Hands or Be Sued, Is Newest Rule

Budapest, June 23 (AP)—Shake hands or be sued is the etiquette here. When Dr. Stefan Szekeres, a lawyer, was introduced to Count Kasimir Zichy, the count omitted the handshape. The lawyer went to court and had the count fined $85 for a "severe personal insult."

ROOSEVELT IS IN FIGHT TO END TWO-THIRDS

delegation holds its caucus Sunday afternoon. Then, with the aid of his chief lieutenants, John H. McCooey, veteran leader of Brooklyn, and Edward R. and Daniel A. O'Connell of Albany, he will attempt to line up the New York delegates for Baker.

The Curry-McCooey-O'Connell combination controls more than a majority of New York's 94 delegates, but no attempt will be made to force any of the Roosevelt or Smith delegates into line for Baker by steam roller methods.

With Tammany taking its own time for a decision on convention policies, Roosevelt supporters looked more and more favorably today upon an effort to kick the ancient and revered two-thirds rule out of the convention.

TWO-THIRDS RULE FIGHT

Even before Curry's caucus announcement was made, the Roosevelt group had placed itself in a strategic position to wage a battle against the two-thirds rule. Louisiana's Huey Long, who unlike most Southern Democrats, is anxious to see the old rule go, was shifted from the resolutions to the rules committee on the tentative slate drawn up at Roosevelt headquarters.

Generally speaking, it has been the Southern wing of the party that in the past has insisted upon retaining the two-thirds rule.

Leaders of both factions also were making preparations for the impending battle over a permanent chairman.

SHOUSE-WALSH CONTEST

The Roosevelt group wants Senator Walsh of Montana, who presided in 1924. The Smith-Raskob combine backs Jouett Shouse, chairman of the national executive committee.

Tentatively chosen members of the resolutions committee, which will draft the party platform, were called together today to begin that important work. At their head was Gilbert Hitchcock, former senator from Nebraska, and choice of the Roosevelt group for the chairmanship.

As the platform sizes up now it will include a declaration for submission to the people of a constitutional amendment to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment.

Gov. William A. Murray of Oklahoma arrived predicting that Roosevelt would not win the nomination.

"Who do you think the nominee will be?" the Oklahoma governor was asked as he stepped from a train.

"You can guess as well as I can," he said, "but his name won't be Roosevelt."

Smith Shows His Fight Is to Beat Roosevelt

Chicago, June 23—The "Happy Warrior" of other days, Al Smith, has brought his bombastic Tammanyism to Chicago and has thrown a disturbing wrench into the rainbow calculations of the Roosevelt leaders.

During the next few days Smith will carry on his war to win the nomination for himself or keep Roosevelt from getting it and induce the convention to seek a candidate outside of New York.

Of the three proposals the third probably will make the widest appeal to leaders and delegates anxious to prevent a disastrous split in the party.

Smith seems to realize, in common with all observers, that he has the fight of his life on his hands.

Leaders who conferred with him came away with the pronounced impression that he intended to employ every argument and political device to prevent the convention from naming Roosevelt.

Roosevelt Men Pin Hopes on N. Y., Missouri, Illinois

Albany, N. Y., June 23 (AP)—The forces behind Gov. Roosevelt are reported relying upon virtually a solid New York delegation, Missouri and a large slice of Illinois to push him to the top of the ticket at next week's Democratic convention.

While James A. Farley for a year has expressed confidence Roosevelt would be nominated for the Presidency on the first ballot, others look for the band wagon to start at the end of the second roll call or the beginning of the third. Farley's figures give Roosevelt 856 votes now.

It is believed here the New York delegation of 94 will split two, three or four ways on the first ballot, but swing into line for Roosevelt on the second or third.

Wheeler Joins in Drive to Nominate Roosevelt

Chicago, June 22—Senator Wheeler (D.) of Montana, today joined the war councils of the group seeking to put over the nomination of Gov. Roosevelt, of New York.

Others participating were Arthur F. Mullen, of Nebraska, who will be Roosevelt's floor manager, Homer Cummings of Connecticut, J. Bruce Kremer of Montana, and W. W. Howes of South Dakota.

Louisiana Contest Off Till Tomorrow

Chicago, June 23 (AP)—The Democratic credentials subcommittee failed to take up the Louisiana delegation contest today because of the absence of the group headed by Senator Huey Long.

The Ewing delegation in the absence of the Long group elected to present test oaths, and consideration of the contest was postponed until tomorrow.

Roosevelt Minnesota Group Loses Skirmish

Chicago, June 23 (AP)—Despite protests by the pro-Roosevelt delegation from Minnesota that it was not ready to proceed the National Committee sub-committee appointed to hear Democratic convention seating contests decided today to go ahead.

Pleading that the sub-committee postponed for hearings longer on the Bell-Pennington-Lee Lowry contest brought by former Gov. Y. Sanders against the delegation headed by Sen. Huey Long.

Long challenged the validity of the sub-committee and Sanders expressed unwillingness to proceed in Long's absence.

William F. Donahue of St. Cloud, Minn., representing the Minnesota Roosevelt delegation, also questioned the authority of the sub-committee.

But on motion of Jed C. Adams of Texas the sub-committee agreed to proceed after Ray G. Noonan, Wausau, representing the contesting faction, had expressed readiness to present the case.

Pres. Harriman Is Greeted by Hoover

Washington, June 23 (AP)—Henry I. Harriman of Boston, vice president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, was presented during his call at the White House today by President Hoover, the president announced. The subject of their conversation was not disclosed.

Harriman told newspapermen after the call that he had been out of touch with Washington for a few days and that no new business, either national or international, had been discussed.

Economic Issue 1st, Says Hitchcock

Chicago, June 23 (AP)—Gilbert M. Hitchcock, the Roosevelt chairman of the Democratic resolutions committee, declared today for a party platform emphasizing economic issues rather than prohibition.

Hitchcock voiced the views of other spokesmen of Governor Roosevelt of New York as the Democratic platform making committee met for the first time. He advocated a slash in the tariff and a policy of measured inflation.

STOCK VICTIMS BARE LOSSES IN SENATE PROBE

Washington, June 23 (AP)—Assertion that "the New York Stock Exchange condones a fraud when committed by prominent brokers" was made in the Senate stock market investigation today by Miss Grace Van Brasin Roberts, of Highland, N. Y.

VICTIM TESTIFIES

Miss Ann Gaehes, who works in a bank in Cheyenne, Wyo., testified that in 1929 she was sold Continental Shares stock at $3, although it never brought more than 75 on the exchange and that it is now worth little or nothing.

She told her story as the Senate banking committee turned its attention to what were described as victims of market operations.

NO ACTION TAKEN

Miss Roberts said she complained to the exchange with reference to Hayden, Stone & Company and failed to receive satisfactory action, although she contended the firm guilty of barring the broker-age [illegible] the exchange.

Her complaint, she said, was that Hayden, Stone & Company sold her Atlantic Gulf & West Indies stock in July with a guarantee that it was a good purchase and that the investment would [illegible] in a few days.

Electric Ear* picks anti-knock winner!

Proves new TYDOL leads 17 gasolines in anti-knock quality

Electric Ear GIVES VERDICT

With amazing new sound-recording equipment, engineers triple-check true knock-rating of 17 gasolines on the road... New Anti-Knock TYDOL wins.

Test car with analyzer and sound recording units . . . Equipment truck of the Western Electric Company, ready to test 17 gasolines bought in the open market.

YOU'RE looking at the most revealing and accurate road-test ever made of anti-knock quality. It's the first test of its kind ever run.

It's a knock-test that's down to earth. Made on the road. Made on the hills where your own car knocks.

17 non-ethyl gasolines were bought at road-side stations. They were tested in the same car, under uniform conditions of speed, load and grade. And the new Sound Meter—the amazingly sensitive "Electric Ear"—listened in . . . caught the faintest ping and the loudest pound . . . And, for the first time, registered the facts about anti-knock quality under actual road conditions.

The New Anti-Knock TYDOL won its place at the head of the list. Because actual anti-knock quality has been built into it. Because its thrust of power has been smoothed and silenced at the refinery. Because millions have been spent to give it premium performance at no extra cost. Compare it today with any gasoline. And you'll convince yourself that it has every extra-fare quality—except the price.

CARPENTER DIVORCEE FIGHTS FOR CHILDREN

THIS IS LIFE

CIVIL SERVICE SECURITY MAY BE SACRIFICED TO SURVIVAL OF FITTEST

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

ACCORDING TO THE NEW federal payless furlough plan, recently passed by the House of Representatives, it looks at first sight as if the laborious ant gets it in the neck while the grasshopper and the drone, or whatever other name might be applied to the common or garden civil service, gets off more easily.

PROF. ROGERS

According to the proposed law a clerk earning less than $1000 a year will take a month's vacation without pay. But if he earns over $1000 a year, and is certified by his department head as indispensable, he will continue to work and will take a pay cut of eight and one-third per cent. If he earns from $10,000 to $20,000 he will take a graduated pay cut from 20 per cent up.

These higher brackets do not interest us, but the position of the man who is just over the line and is indispensable does. At first thought the other fellow has it soft. You can see him congratulating himself that we won't have to work while his fellow worker is frying in his office and yet he won't fare so much worse financially. You can see him congratulating himself, as a matter of fact, that he is not indispensable, that a minimum of work is sufficient for him to get by. But the poor boob at the next desk who works so hard and is so faithful and has so much initiative that the government can't do without him is the one to suffer.

Civil Service Security in Danger

I say that is what it looks like at first sight. But I shouldn't be a bit surprised if before this whole thing is ended the average civil service worker may not find his job as secure as he once thought it was. Such workers, of course, can only be removed for cause. In the history of civil service 'for cause' has usually meant such incompetence or disobedience or corruption as to give the authorities a water-tight case against whatever political influence the worker can muster.

But I imagine that in the future a serious government deficit might be considered sufficient cause to remove workers who are not pulling their weight in the boat. The important argument against civil service is not that old one which used to be enunciated so picturesquely by "Plunkett of Tammany Hall," namely, that it discourages young patriots who would like to work for their party. Today one does not hear that old organization cry very often.

The important argument is that civil service breeds a race of permanent office holders, who multiply in numbers like rabbits, whose pay is small in the singular but enormous in the plural, who work comparatively short hours, and who are safe from the ordinary penalties for slackness or incompetence, such as docking, laying-off or dismissal. Tenure is certain and promotion is very slow. The ordinary incentives to efficiency do not exist. Political influence pads the pay-roll with the result that work which in an ordinary business office would be done by a couple of workers may be done in government service by half a dozen.

Indispensable Workers Better Off

I do not think anybody grudges the civil servant his wages. I do think many people feel that such unusual security of tenure is unwise. And I know that nearly everybody is of the opinion that the ordinary civil servant of the lower grades has a softer snap than workers in private industry. That feeling, I imagine, may be crystallizing. If the depression lasts and public opinion becomes vocal enough, those minor bureaucrats who are not at present considered indispensable may wish with all their hearts that they had worked so in the past that they might today be considered so, even with a cut in pay.

The average worker almost never understands why it is that the man who takes his work home with him at night is the man who is, in the long run, safest in his job. The great mass of men and women who at 5 o'clock lay down their shovels or close their desks or cover up their counters have really little conception of the kind of work required for security and advancement in this driving world of ours.

They think of the professional job as an easy job. White collars, no fixed hours, no manual labor, an appearance of ease and leisure. They never think of the brief case taken home at night and wrestled over till midnight. They never think of the night hours of planning, devising, correcting, worrying how to meet the pay-roll, and all the rest of it.

That congenital blindness of most human beings of the less successful sort accounts, for instance, for the wide-spread jealousy which the working class exhibits towards members of their own class teaching in the public schools. It seems to me that against them the drive for welfare contributions and pay-cuts is especially directed. Teaching seems pleasant, easy work, with long vacations. But these people never think that the competent teacher usually puts in at least as many hours of outside work as of classroom work. Half the summer vacation goes into hard study for professional advancement or even professional security. It is not a life of ease.

Success Doesn't Punch Time Clock

I do not believe that it is an exaggeration to say that the reasonably successful business man or professional man puts in habitually at least twice the number of hours per day as the worker who stops on the stroke of five and never thinks of his job until the next day. And he puts most of it in during the hours the time clock man spends in loafing. And the chances are that he works harder, more continuously and more intensively, while he is working than the worker with the eight-hour routine job.

If I were in Washington these days, in a civil service job, I should by far prefer to be called indispensable and take a cut and work my head off in a department whose personnel has been decimated, than enjoy my vacation. For the next step will be—or ought to be—to scrutinize these departments carefully and see how they can be operated with a smaller permanent force. When that step comes, and with the present temper of the American people the time may not be so far off, the boys and girls on their vacations may find those vacations permanent. It seems to be the law of Nature.

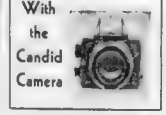
Somerville City Hall With the Candid Camera



By CANDID CAMERA

Somerville! City Hall! Gee, that's a busy spot and a busy city. I was carried over there to get a glimpse of what goes on behind the doors of that big building. And things do go on there, let me tell you. They all treat you fine, from elevator man to mayor. Here's some of the city officials.

First let's meet the head of this municipality. Here he is, Mayor John J. Murphy. Note that smile. He combines a smile with a telephone conversation. Visitors always get a great reception.

Now let's meet the mayor's secretary. He's Henry J. McHenry. Great fellow, too. He takes care of all the mayor's secretarial work and does a good job. He's going over one of the many books.

Maurice F. Ahearn is the chairman of the board of assessors for Somerville. Even now he's talking business. A busy man is he.

Last, but by no means least, is John Kelley, who has been in the employ of Somerville for 33 years. He's the commissioner of public buildings. He supervises all public buildings.

Seabury and Mills Get Harvard Degrees

MANY FAMOUS MEN RECEIVE AWARDS

Premier Bennett of Canada in List; Record Number of 2205 End College Careers

In conferring an honorary Doctor of Laws degree on Samuel Seabury of New York today, A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard, referred to him enthusiastically as "a knight engaged in mortal combat with the dragon assailing the greatest city in the land."

During the applause that followed, the stern face of the vice and graft investigator of New York city did not change expression.

Mr Seabury was one of a number of illustrious men awarded honorary degrees during the closing exercises of commencement week, in the course of which 2205 students were graduated.

The degrees and those honored with them follow.

DOCTOR OF LAWS

Richard Bedford Bennett, premier of Canada.

Odgen L. Mills, Secretary of the Treasury

Samuel Seabury, former justice of the Supreme Court of New York, and head of the current investigation of the city's affairs.

John Dewey, professor of philosophy at Columbia, and a distinguished liberal in the field of politics, philosophy and morals

DOCTOR OF DIVINITY

The Rev Charles Edwards Park pastor of the First Unitarian Church

The Rev. Frank Hugh Foster professor emeritus, Oberlin College, Ohio.

DOCTOR OF SCIENCE

Robert Andrews Millikan, director of Norman Bridge Laboratory of Physics and Chemistry and member of the executive council of California Institute of Technology

Lawrence Joseph Henderson, professor of biological chemistry, Harvard

DOCTOR OF LETTERS

John Livingston Lowes, Francis Lee Higginson professor of English literature at Harvard

MASTER OF ARTS

Dr. Edward Reynolds former director of Peabody Museum, Harvard

Judge Seabury was not the only one of the honored guests Dr. Lowell complimented.

Of Secretary Mills, he said: "Here is a public officer with the courage to take the responsibility of the nation's chief financial agent at a critical time."

In conferring the degrees on Premier Bennett, Dr. Lowell spoke of Canada as a "proud land, at last come into its own among the nations of the earth."

Gov. Ely, Lt. Gov. Youngman and S. Loring Young were among those present for the closing exercises. Mr. Young, as marshal of the class of 07, made the presentation of the $100,000 the class raised for alma mater.

Today's class was the largest ever turned out at Harvard. Of the 2205, 693 were from the class of 1932, 693 from the lower school. There was the biggest honor group ever boasted by any class.

Among those going out with honors were W. Barry Wood Jr., football captain; Oscar Sutermeister, pole vaulter, and Bay Estes, distance runner.

WHAT MAXIE DID TO HER

She bet on Schmeling. Her wager was to walk to work in a barrel if the champion was bested by Jack Sharkey. There was a compromise, however. The winner agreed she would be just as well paid if Miss Helen Callahan would stroll about Holbrook. She did. Here is the procession.

PILLBOX TURNS INTO PROBLEM

Woburn's famous "pillbox" has been forfeited to the government but the government scratched its head today and wondered what it was going to do about it.

The "pillbox" which contains a huge alcohol still, worth with the other materials, from $50,000 to $75,000, was forfeited to the prohibition division several days ago in federal court.

Plans were started for removal of the still and its accessories, but the dry agents ran up against a snag when they discovered the still could not be dismantled and the parts removed without tearing down part of the curiously-constructed building.

Another snag was struck when it was found there was no room available in any present government warehouse for the 30-foot-square pillbox.

Meanwhile the federal men were investigating a secret link between the "pillbox" and a warehouse in another Greater Boston community, believed to have been a supply depot for the operators of the "pillbox."

Mayor Orders Grass Plot Be Beautified

The unsightly grass plot at the traffic circle at Charles and Cambridge sts., West End, today caused Mayor Curley to order that supervision of the place be transferred from the public works to the park department. Grass will be sown and trees will be planted.

Flies to Meeting

Hugh Butler, New England representative of the U. S. Department of Commerce, will fly by autogyro to Fairlee, Vt., tonight for the quarterly meeting of the New England Council. He will leave from the Wellesley Natick airport.

ELY'S CHOICE FOR BENCH

Prof. Felix Frankfurter, of Harvard Law School, who was appointed to the State Supreme Court bench by Gov. Ely, shown at his home in Brattle st., Cambridge, with his wife. (Staff photo.)

3 JUSTICES AND AL SMITH BACK FRANKFURTER

Liberals and Progressives Hail Harvard Man's Choice as Fuller Denounces Him

The appointment of Prof. Felix Frankfurter to the Supreme court bench was hailed by liberals and progressives throughout the state today.

The Harvard law professor, with his broad perspective unrestricted by any "apprenticeship" in the Massachusetts judiciary, will balance the court to perfection, his many friends pointed out.

In join the voiced opposition of former Gov. Fuller, who resented Prof. Frankfurter's efforts on behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti, no organized opposition that might prevent confirmation of the appointment is anticipated.

Prof. Frankfurter has the indorsement of two famous and beloved Massachusetts jurists—Oliver Wendell Holmes, former associate justice of the U. S. Supreme Court and Justice Louis Brandeis.

Justice Cardozo of New York the most recent appointee to the U. S. Supreme Court, also indorses the Harvard professor, as does Alfred E. Smith.

The Governor's Council will not vote on the appointment until July 6. The regular weekly meeting scheduled for June 29 when Prof. Frankfurter's appointment ordinarily would be voted upon, will be omitted because of the Democratic National Convention.

MOTHER IN SUIT TO KEEP HER 4 CHILDREN

Charges Rich Belmont Grandmother Seeks to Take Them So She Cannot See Them

An income of $3000 a year for four minor children barely covers the cost of educating three of them, it was claimed in Middlesex probate court today, as Mrs. Mae Carpenter of Belmont fought an action to allow her wealthy mother-in-law to take the children out of the state.

Mrs. Mae Carpenter, in November 1930, was divorced by James F. Carpenter, wealthy auditor, and the four children were given in custody to his mother, Mrs. Charlotte Carpenter of Brimmer st., Beacon Hill.

Carpenter sued on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment, but during trial of the suit there was considerable testimony about other men, including one described as C. H. O., a prominent baseball figure." The baseball man's nickname, according to the testimony, was "Brick."

IN TWO SCHOOLS

Under terms of the will of James Carpenter, late husband of Mrs. Charlotte Carpenter, his four grandchildren were left a bequest which gives them an income of $900 a year for the four.

Because the $3000 covers the cost of educating but three of them, it was testified by Atty. Henry O. Cushman, trustee, with Mrs. Charlotte Carpenter, of the estate, three of the children have been in a private school at Ashburnham, while the fourth have been in a school in Waltham, with her tuition paid by her grandmother.

The grandmother seeks permission to place the four children in Derrycourt School at Berlin, Ct., where tuition for all four will be only $3000.

Apposing the petition, the mother of the children charged on the stand that her mother-in-law threatened to put the children where the mother could not see them.

SHOUTS HER DENIAL

Her divorced husband, she declared, has remarried and has visited the children only two or three times since they have been in the two schools.

From her seat in the courtroom, the grandmother shouted a denial that she had threatened to place the children where the mother could not see them. Judge Bean requested that the grandmother be placed on the stand and put her denial in testimony.

Then the case was takenunder advisement.

Husband's Story Wins Him Decree

John C. Stewart, drygoods clerk of Wakefield, was granted an uncontested divorce by Judge Colin C. Campbell in Middlesex Probate Court, after he testified that his wife, Mrs. Laura E. Stewart, but him with a fly swatter, threw books at him and shut off the radio when he was listening to it. Stewart testified his wife was out with another man on an average of about three times a week. Since separating from his wife, Stewart testified, his health has improved and he has gained 15 pounds in weight.

28 NEW INDUSTRIES STARTED IN GREATER BOSTON IN MAY

NEW RECORD IN MAY; TOTAL OF 104 FOR 1932

Other Established Plants Expanded Providing More Jobs

A highly encouraging increase in industrial activity in Greater Boston was reported today by the Bureau of Commercial and Industrial Affairs of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

Twenty-eight new manufacturing industries were established during May, the bureau reports, and in addition several existing industries were expanded.

These developments increase the total of new industries in Greater Boston the present year to 104, as compared with 21 in the same period last year.

SETS RECORD FOR MONTH

The total of new industries for May is the largest for any month since the bureau began compilation of these statistics two and a half years ago.

The new industries are in nine different cities and towns—Boston 10, Lynn 3, Chelsea, Revere, Cambridge, Newton, Salem, Waltham and Wilmington one each.

The list includes shoe factories, printing plants and shops for making women's clothing, furniture, chemical products, boxes, vases, soap, metal stampings, awnings, batteries, auto parts, buttons, cushions and upholstery, restaurant equipment and leather bags.

BOSTON'S OWN SHARE

The new Boston industries are the Boston Maid Dress Co., Cooney Spicer Co., printers; Pioneer Manufacturing Co., paper containers; Crosby Carton Co., Inc., Goodwear Manufacturing Co., harness apparel; Frame & Axel Agreement Co. of New England, Joseph B. Tuch, Inc., women's dresses, Veteran Press, Lorena Bakery Mfg. Co. and Purity Cone Co.

Expansion plans have been announced by the Tide-Water Oil Sales Co.; Jenney Mfg. Co., Hatcheldez Snyder, Dorr & Doe Co., United Sportswear Corp., Star Underwear Co., Friend Bros., Inc., Zone Mfg. Co., Burns Bros., Gordon-Marsters, Inc., and New England Foundry Co.

DELAY REFUSED IN INDUSTRIAL TRUST TRIAL

Case Goes on July 5, Declares Judge, After Tiff With Attorney; 12 Face Charges

Judge Louis S. Cox today refused to postpone the opening scheduled for July 5 of the trial of 12 defendants indicted on a charge of conspiracy in the Industrial Bank & Trust Co. case.

ALLEN QUESTIONED

Judge Cox asked several questions of Allen, who is counsel for Hull, in an effort to determine whether Hull was seeking the postponement and he appeared to be vexed at the answers of the former attorney-general.

Allen said Hull had authorized him to use his own discretion in agreeing to a postponement. Assistant District Attorney John Joseph Murphy vigorously objected and said he was ready for trial.

Court then inquired of Allen whether Hull was asking the postponement. Allen replied that he was ready to "agree to postponement."

"I'm not interested in its ands and buts," said Judge Cox. "There is only one issue, and that is whether Hull, who requested immediate trial, now requests postponement. That is the only condition upon which I will listen to any suggestion of postponement."

Allen started to explain that the decision was within his own discretion when Judge Cox interrupted.

TRIAL SET FOR JULY 5

"I'm not interested in that," he said. "The trial goes on July 5."

Any special pleas that may be filed today, the last day permitted, will be argued tomorrow morning before Judge Hanify, court told counsel. Murphy said he was ready.

The grand jury, which has only another week to complete its business, continued its probe of the Industrial case today. Court Clerk William Prendiba, who yesterday received the jury's fourth invitation to testify to Gov. Ely, was in the courtroom for a few minutes. The jury, it is believed, hasn't yet abandoned hope of having the governor as a witness, although he is scheduled to leave the state tonight.

TRAFFIC LIGHTS DOUSED

As the first step of Cambridge's municipal economy drive, all the city's traffic lights will be shut off between midnight and 7 o'clock in the morning for an indefinite period.

At the same time Mayor Russell made known that he has planned for an economy conference in City Hall on Monday night, to which all city officials, including members of the city council and school committee, will be invited.

The order on the traffic lights was put into effect at midnight last night by City Electrician Timothy C. O'Hearn. To make a further saving the 60-watt bulbs now used will be replaced with 40-watt bulbs. It is estimated that the curtailment will save the city $1750 this year.

The economy conference, Mayor Russell said, would be for the purpose "of considering a program for meeting the increased demands for welfare relief and other exigencies occasioned by the depression."

SPRINTER WINS 5000 PENNIES

A nimble young man who really should be on somebody's track team sprinted himself into $50 in pennies in Malden today.

A money truck was on its way to deliver a payroll to the Blood market in Malden when the rear door was jounced open, and a sack containing 5000 pennies jolted out into the road at Middlesex and Centre sts.

An alert chap of 20 or so grabbed it and ran. John L. Hennessay of Lynn the driver, turned his truck around to give chase, but lost the trail. Police from Malden headquarters, a block away, took up the chase, but the finders-keepers party was not found.

IRATE TAR QUITS GROUNDED BOAT

Bernard Kennedy of Quincy was so discouraged early today that he swam ashore near the steamer landing at Nantasket, thoroughly angry at two companions in a grounded power boat.

Kennedy, 30, was found in bedraggled condition at the edge of the new state road near Paragon Park and gave police a story that sent them and the coast guard on a search for two "drowned" men.

Meanwhile, they held Kennedy on a drunkenness charge.

Daybreak came and revealed no boat that Kennedy said had capsized.

A search between Pemberton and the landing was in progress when the companions reported by telephone they were safe and sound in Quincy.

"Kennedy got mad and swam in when we grounded," the two reported. The trio were aboard the Alma, a 40-foot craft.

Malden Man Held in Furniture Theft

George O'Farrall of Oliver st., Malden was in Roxbury court today charged with larceny of furniture from a mail-order house. He formerly was assistant shipper for the concern.

Police said he used his position to have the furniture sent to a vacant house. He was held in $1000 for trial June 29.

Ely Gives Respite to Convicted Slayer

A month's respite has been granted Silvester Fernandes, 24, of Barnstable, slayer of John Alves, who is under sentence to die in the electric chair at state prison the week of July 10.

The respite was granted by Gov. Ely and the executive council on motion of Lieut. Gov. Youngman, in order to give Fernandes an opportunity to ask executive clemency.

Gunman Robs Store Proprietor of $30

A lone holdup man robbed Abraham Wasserman, proprietor of a delicatessen in West Newton, of $30 in cash today.

Woman Burned as Gasoline Explodes

Because she insisted a neighbor was a poor sense of humor, Mrs. Ida Marsina of Federal st., Lynn, suffered serious burns today. Mrs. Marsina was told to mix gasoline with water to prove whereupon it exploded. The fumes exploded.

Mrs. Marsina's daughter, who was visiting, Mrs. Marsina, lived with her to present a fire. Mrs. [illegible] was under care of a physician.

AIDED BY PROSECUTOR

MAN IN GOWN SEIZES TRIO

One robbery was enough for Ian Curley, 30, of Preston st., Malden. It made him "mad."

And so in a nightgown he heard thieves breaking into his camp on McCormack ave., North Medford, he went after them in his long nightgown, armed with a shotgun.

Still in the nightgown, he marched three youths out of the cellar and up the avenue to the home of a neighbor, Thomas Hagen, who called the police.

Those arrested are James Farrell, 24, of Waverly st., Joseph McCarthy, 22, of Everett st., and William J. Burke, 26, of Beacon Hill ave., all of Lynn, and all well-known athletes. They were held for trial in Malden next Monday.

"Three months ago a gang looted this camp," said Curley. "I don't know what these fellows came for. There wasn't anything valuable left.

"First, they banged at my front door, but I didn't answer. Then I heard the cellar door being forced and I grabbed the shotgun and went after them. A fourth fellow drove away in an auto, but I got the numbers."

Receiver Asked for Waltham Bleachery

The city of Waltham has filed a petition in Middlesex Superior Court asking the appointment of a receiver for the Waltham Bleachery & Dye Works.

The petition is based on the failure of the company to satisfy two judgments, totaling $31, obtained for taxes assessed on personal property. The hearing will be held on Friday. The city asks a tax title to the real estate because of failure to pay taxes.

HAROLD STIRLING VANDERBILT and his friend, Francis Appleton, had the good old college spirit as they paraded around the stadium with the rest of the class of 1907.

GEORGE W. BAILEY took very good care of Mrs. Bailey as may be seen from this camera shot . . . a good lunch was enjoyed by all . . . including Ward Canaday, president of the United States Advertising Corp., the largest advertising concern in the world and Seth Thomas Gano, secretary of the class of '07, treasurer of the Gano Realty Co., Land Co., former secretary to Mrs. Henry L. Higginson . . . awarded "Palme Academique" by the French government. The '07 class reunion proved a great success.

World Celebrities at '07 Class Reunion

FANCY BEING ASKED TO MEET HALF A HUNDRED of the world's celebrities all in one day . . . you will pardon our finding it pretty hard to fix our minds on things mundane when we have just said adieu to none other than Harold Vanderbilt, Francis Appleton, B. Loring Young, George Whitney Winthrop Aldrich, Austin Amory, Robert L. Bacon Hatherly Foster, Jr., Ward Canaday and hundreds of others . . .

• • •

We met Mr. Vanderbilt at the Union as he came in with Francis Appleton to register . . . and to find a place to put a straw hat . . . he found it. He is just as tall and handsome as ever . . . and his companion, Appleton, even more so with nice brown eyes. How these two prize bachelors ever escaped the "wimmin" as always a wistful topic among the Fair Things . . .

Baileys Attend

ON OUR ARRIVAL AT Eliot Hall the first person we met was George Bailey and his equally charming wife as they greeted . . . George has put on a few pounds since this was the 25th reunion ever staged by the class of 1907 . . . and that's what keeps him perfect for the Harvard-Yale baseball game the pros are having a bike race over and a was well in progress . . . he's a great lad . . .

Whitneys There

AS LINGUIST IN OUR PARTY we did most of the talking so we asked "Isn't that George Whitney and his family coming towards us?" and sure enough it was . . . Mrs. Whitney was very attractive in a green boucle knit with daughter, Martha, Phyllis, and the two boys, George, Jr., and Robert. We greeted them gaily, dying to ask George what was going to happen to the Gold Standard, but, of course, it was not the time nor the place . . .

MANY MOTHERS-IN-LAW 'FIT IN' — MISS FAIRFAX

The Old Joke Sometimes Falls Flat

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"MOTHER-IN-LAW is the very dear mother of your wife or your husband as the case may be. She can be an angel to you. If she appears at times to be very trying—whose fault is it?

A young married man coming home across water, away from a visit to his own people, the content of baggage largely his unusual story. Young he matter all about his charming wife and lovely children, he chuckled as well on the perfection of his mother-in-law. "I just hope for mother's sake," he said, "she's bound to say I spoil the baby. Is human enough to have some fault, as well."

And I know of a man with the wife of an officer in the navy, who, when he can get his pay, only has her own mother but mother-in-law. Mother-in-law home. She makes a point of held out to every [illegible] afield [illegible] understand [illegible] tenant [illegible] minding [illegible] anything [illegible] between [illegible] which one she is going to make the choice of the [illegible] be happy. They divide the week between them.

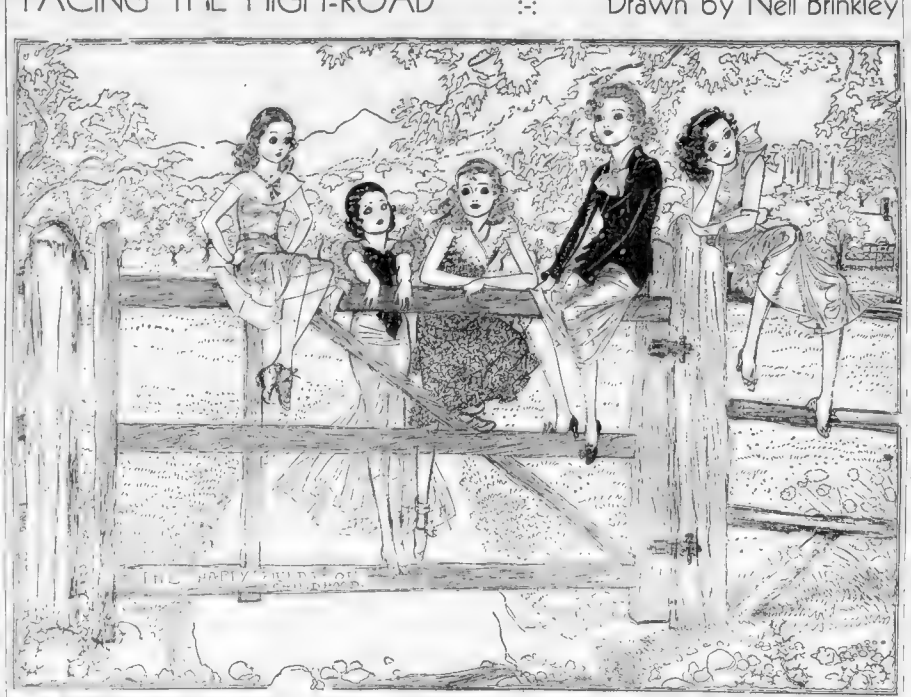
With the exception [illegible] before [illegible] the base for [illegible] talk and keep [illegible] mother-in-law and I am not think it large [illegible]

We hear [illegible] trouble [illegible] Husband [illegible] when this lady was in her home the bride's [illegible] refused such [illegible] Can't [illegible] the flowers [illegible] sent her and [illegible] ments you paid? [illegible] younger [illegible] Are they [illegible] bushand? Keep [illegible] with them [illegible]

And, Lady Skeptical Wife, the mother of your husband is the same person whom you addressed always in my [illegible] asking in your [illegible] "what he likes." And [illegible] forget the other [illegible] discussions before "the day"? If she seems [illegible], sometimes, it may be due to weariness and pain that you must agree she is bearing heroically.

"FACING THE HIGH-ROAD"

Drawn by Nell Brinkley



IS IT [illegible] THIS par[illegible] June the month of [illegible] on a [illegible] to June when young folk hear of home and abroad the constant whisper of depression, when its YOUNG letters I am getting are extra ambitious and bothered about the future, is it because this June of all June [illegible] in a pinch I and poor summer?

However [illegible] very young girl [illegible] with the [illegible] sensible, searching, bothered, ambitious letters it has ever been my fortune to receive. They make a grown-up solemn. I remember that I was ambitious, too, when I was on the gate searching the rocky-looking outside world, still safely in the HAPPY FIELDS OF CHILD HOOD, but just ready to hop out. Behind me the green perfection of irresponsibility—just at the gate it ended, and brambles and thorn and rocks, and a rough but a luring b[illegible]groad began. I dreamed and wished and worried and planned.

But I do not think I planned with the adult head, the practical acceptance of little money and great need that one experiences that are writing to me are using! They recognize a difficult way ahead. Such as this:

"I wanted to take this summer for my university money next year—but there are two thousand fellows and girls in my town wanting the same thing—so I see I'm going to have hard going." "I was just too late to get a job—they had [illegible] skilled girls go, just before I got there." There isn't any too much money about our house this year—and I'd give my head to get to Art School—HOW, HOW can I[illegible] ever when you left school? I feel like lifting the world—and the chance to get a grip anywhere looks so slim.' "I'm going to be SOMEBODY—and it's going to take some planning.

How nice they are! How fine! How much to be valued and helped a[illegible] we can—we older ones! This young crowd leaving scho[illegible] is not like the young crowd who left at the ending of the war and some years after. They are barking back, many of them, to the simpler, saner young folks of America's earlier history. Here's luck when you hop off the fence!

Daily True Story

A Super-Salesman

"I SHOULD HOPE to tell you I'll not give him a job, Myrtle," her father said shortly. "The salesman I'm looking for is a fellow who'll stick right tight to business. That's the way I've always done. No one catches me soaring about the country at 60 miles an hour, here, there and everywhere."

"Now, Dad," replied Myrtle when he paused for breath, "I'm going to tell you something. You don't know it and for that matter, neither does Harman Blake himself know it. I'm going to marry him one of these days."

"My ——!" gasped her father. "You don't say so. And you want young Blake to have the job so your future living is assured."

"Not at all, darling," she answered in her silkiest voice. "I only want to make sure you're a live wire in your business and can keep swimming 15 years from now. So far you've swung along on your name."

"As head of the most expensive motor car sold in this city," began her father pompously, "as head of this sales organization, I say—er—ah—oh well, send along your young Romeo and I'll try him out. But mind this well, I'll not have him chasing over the country-side in any car of mine. The most costly car made can't be used like one of these little runabouts the high school lads build out of something the cat's forgotten."

"Is that so, now?" murmured Myrtle. "You'd think they could stand the abuse, wouldn't you?"

SCORNED TO REPLY

The following afternoon, the new salesman—Harmon Blake said without preliminaries:

"If a customer's worth selling, Mr. Merrick, I'll sell him."

"Any customer," retorted Merrick, testily, "is worth selling." Then he stared out of the wide window eagerly. "Well, if that wouldn't tie a can to a cat's tail! There's Brickett of Brickett & Bauman's, collaring a customer right in front of our show window, if you please."

Before more could be said, Brickett (his hand under the prospective customer's elbow) entered the salesroom and steered to wards Merrick.

"This is Mr. MacArthur," Brickett introduced the customer suavely. "A week or so back he was thinking of buying one of our really good cars. He wishes, however, to look over your line before deciding on ours. Lives out in Walnut Hills."

"Westwind Hills," corrected the customer, his eyes roving over the gleaming models before him. "I might take a look at that job."

Brickett's face fell. MacArthur was still undecided between an eight thousand dollar job and a ten thousand. "You are," he told Merrick, "it's my uncle who will really buy the car. Brickett tried to sell him and high-pressure him until he wouldn't talk any more. I like Brickett's car. I don't mind telling you. But uncle called off the whole deal."

"Really," murmured Merrick.

They demonstrated the car in the late twilight when the roads were empty because even motorists dine promptly. Blake sat behind in lonely state while Merrick drove and explained the beauties of this model.

"We're near home now," said MacArthur slowly. "If I could just coax uncle outside to look at it . . . it really runs like a charm . . . I like it a lot. I'll tell you, I'll bring him out and maybe you and your salesman could just step behind that bush there. If Uncle can look at it without feeling high-pressured under a salesman's eye."

Merrick was well pleased. The try-out had been perfect.

"You've driven this car or this make before? Good. You drive it up your lane right to the door and show it to your uncle. Blake and I will wait here—"

"Oh, no, we won't," said Blake lazily from the back seat.

"We'll wait here," said Merrick firmly with a reproving glance at Blake.

The customer had already slipped beneath the great wheel and had the car in gear.

"We know scarcely anything of this fellow," said Blake in a low tone. "He can't take this car out of sight."

BLAKE GETS THE DROP

"Spoil a sale, you dunshhead!" roared Merrick. "Brickett knew him, didn't he? Introduced him, didn't he?"

"He didn't," said Blake. "He didn't even know the man's correct address"—and suddenly to the customer, "Don't try to draw your gat, fellow. Mine's on your heart right now."

"I'll this lane," Black continued after his swift jeu-jitsu hold had rendered the stranger momentarily helpless, "is the county tuberculosis home. In back is another highway where in two minutes this new car would have been speeding while you waited for 'Uncle' to make up his mind. I found that out by driving about the country a lot."

Can you t[illegible] gasped Merrick when [illegible] to business never went anyplace.

"Tut, tut. Sure I can beat it. Also in running about the country I've noticed [illegible] bird's posts in police stations and postoffices. There's $500 reward out for him. I'd set Myrtle and me up in housekeeping eh, Pop?" he asked suddenly.

"You can have this car for a wedding gift," gulped Merrick. "I have been a fine ex[illegible] for you," he ended honestly.

"Thank, but we'll take a roadster for me," said Blake calmly. "We shan't need this big car [illegible] later."

SKYSCRAPER — By Faith Baldwin

Lynn Talks to Dwight of Tom

What Has Gone Before

Lynn Harding, young and pretty, is ambitious for a career in the Seacoast Bank and Trust Company. She loves Tom Shepard, secretary to one of the vice presidents, but will not marry him, feeling they both must make their careers first. Then Lynn meets David Dwight, a prominent lawyer, through Sarah Dennet, her chief at the bank. Dwight is attracted to Lynn and invites her and Sarah to his apartment for dinner. Lynn's room-mate, Jennie Le Grande, a model, warns her that Dwight is dangerous.

Now Read On—

SUCH GIRLS were always kind, of course; gentle but not docile; spirited but not shrewd-ish. Such girls should be protected and befriended.

He believed it.

So much so that a few days later he left his office early and drove west in an express elevator and waited impatiently as a boy, at noontide just outside the doors of her office. And when she came out, brave in a spring suit as gray as her eyes, but with a small scarlet hat for gaiety, as bright as her lips, he said feeling young and high-hearted

GLAD TO SEE HIM

"Well, how about lunch?"

She was glad to see him; said so. Said, also with a small scowl of indecision "I haven't much time. I have to be out of the office this afternoon. I've made an appointment in just an hour."

"We'll go downstairs to the Gavarin, then," he suggested.

She hesitated, nodded. Tom came by seeing no one but herself, taking her arm in his firm grasp.

"Lunch, honey!"

She said, a little embarrassed, "I'm sorry, Tom. I didn't know you were going to be free."

Then he recognized David Dwight standing there beside her, so erect of head, so infernally well dressed.

"That's all right." He spoke to Dwight. He said, "Good morning, sir," in accents which endowed Mr. Dwight with a long gray beard, a limp, and a rheumy eye. Then he was off, saving over his shoulder, "See you tonight, Lynn."

Dwight looked after him. "Good-looking boy. I've seen him before, haven't I? I don't exactly place him."

PRIVATE SECRETARY

Lynn explained as they moved toward the elevators: "Tom Shepard. He's Mr. Norton's private secretary."

"Oh, yes," recalled Dwight in a tone of complete dismissal.

She was annoyed. She was annoyed with herself for being annoyed. What right had David Dwight to face that here toward Tom—her Tom? On the other hand, why, she, Lynn Harding, was, of course, going to him. She was nonplussed, how jarred by her sparkling flare of anger, but a second and he was back, bank companion and [illegible] immediately displayed [illegible] going to the [illegible].

They [illegible] not the usual [illegible] and Dwight was talking [illegible] when Lynn, poked up to [illegible] how he knew [illegible] Jennie's [illegible] between the tables followed by [illegible] stopped [illegible].

"Why, it's Mara Burt," said Lynn to herself, and called out, "Oh, Mara!" and the other girl stopped to smile and wave. With a gesture she indicated to her escort that she preferred a table further back in the room. They moved on and sat down.

ATTRACTIVE

"That's an attractive girl," Dwight commented. "The baby-faced type, but what lovely red hair. Bank employe?"

No; but she works in the building, in a branch insurance office on the thirtieth floor," Lynn replied. "I haven't seen her for some time."

"I wish I could persuade a pretty girl to look at me as she is looking at her companion," Dwight sighed. "She is certainly making a play for that young man—lucky devil."

Lynn said abstractedly, "I don't think so. She's married, you know."

And Dwight shouted with laughter.

"That's classic. Speaking of young men—and pretty girls—what about this Shepard boy?"

Lynn's eyes fell to the modest diamond on her right hand. He probably knew about her and Tom now; possibly Sarah had told him. She answered honestly.

"We—we can't get married. Not now, that is."

A bald statement. He understood it in all its implications. His eyes did not change, his face was impassive but a glint of anger sharpened its lines in his hard. Of course! It would happen. He looked at Lynn [illegible] as ordinary girl [illegible] of others. And an old man's boy, who had an average job. Two commonplace people planning a wedding [illegible] and a small apartment [illegible] and babies [illegible].

He said gently, "You're very young."

LOOKED AT HIM

"I know it." She looked at him, gray eyes black, the pupils dilated. "And so is he. We—we've left each other free. It's better that way. I want to keep on with my job. I like it awfully." She made a hopeless little gesture with the hand which wore the ring. "Tom won't hear of my marrying him until—until he gets ahead. He doesn't want me to work. So there we are!"

Her face was grave. Then she laughed up at Dwight. "Sarah doesn't approve at all," she admitted. "Sarah doesn't believe in marriage; she's all for careers. I don't believe Sarah's ever been in love in all her life!"

Ah, had she not? Dwight knew. His heart tightened. "How old is Tom?"

Lynn told him.

"And you?" You told me once. Tell me again." She obeyed. He laughed suddenly, relieved. "Infants!" he mocked.

Twenty-two and twenty-three not planning to marry yet; tomorrow was another day. How had he ever thought her ordinary, even for a moment; how had he ever fancied her like anyone else in the world? She was unique.

Competition is the life of several trades.

He said happily, "Never mind Sarah. Suppose you bring Tom and that model girl with whom you live—what's Betty?"

"Jennie," Lynn corrected, laughing.

THROW A PARTY

"Jennie, then. Bring her and Tom to the house. We'll throw a party—for you. A young party—not, perhaps, altogether in years. Whom would you like to meet? Stage or motion-picture folk, artists, writers? Or just people?"

Her eyes danced. She said "Anyone you say. It will be fun."

"Well make it so. We'll dispense with Sarah, I think. She's not as young as we are," he added cruelly. "Yes, we'll dispense with her. That is, if you don't mind. We're old enough friends by now, are we not, to get along without the tertium quid?"

The Marry-Go-Round; Skidding

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE AVERAGE man is so afraid of skidding into matrimony that he sprinkles the path of matrimony with tacks instead of wash boards and keeps both hands on the wheel and both eyes on the road ahead.

Many a girl, who thinks that she is getting a very masterful caveman along with her wedding ring, discovers later that she has just gotten a spoiled child for Father's Day present.

Marry a man who has faith in himself, but not in himself as a model. Unless he has one much to be thankful for, he's one big fool.

A man simply cannot understand why a woman cries when she hasn't a penny with which to buy anything. But good gracious! Even a straw vote has its use.

No matter how much a woman may admire her husband it always astonishes her to discover that another woman regards him as a dashing Don Juan type. A man whose feet are flat as pancakes pattern in mustard water and whose arches are high as the Alps

Record Crowd Will Swoop Down on Rockingham

"I can't see it a-tall, a-tall. I have whipped Schmeling," explicitly declares a friend [illegible] when the German practically left the ring unmarked, [illegible] come here with his left eye closed tight with a purple [illegible]. We didn't see the battle, Old Dean and so can't argue with him. But we do know that after battle decorations mean little. Some fighters mark up easily while the epidermis of others is impervious to the dumdire of opponents. Jack Dempsey always looked as skin in brine to toughen it. Gene Tunney also used a skin hardening solution. Early in his career Gene was a notorious bleeder. All an opponent had to do was to draw a glove across Tunney's lips to produce a crimson trickle. Tap Tunney on [illegible] and he would spout blood like a wounded bear. But as Gene went along his skin hardened. Under constant punishing Nature thickened his skin and Gene helped out Mother Nature with [illegible] toughening sessions. You would never have recognized the Tunney of his last two years in the ring as the [illegible] of his early ring days. You never can tell what damage a blow will do. A hard blow squarely on the eye, but whose impact is broken by forehead and cheekbone, leaves no injury. A flesh cut across the eyeball itself will destroy a fighter's vision and a light punch in the right or wrong place produces a mouse or closes the eye completely.

No, it wasn't the heat. Neither, we assure you, had we looked upon the wine when it was red, nor the hooch when it was redder. But we'll admit that we staggered and almost fell in the Hotel Manger lobby, yesterday. And so would you, if you had seen what we saw—Gentleman Jack Washburn and Referee Bert Potts walking arm in arm and cooing like a pair of turtle doves! Jack Washburn, who a few short weeks ago threw Potts out of the ring into the hospital and himself into jail! We couldn't have been more surprised if we had jumped Al Smith and old man Volstead marching to the altar. Pulling a bottle of smelling salts from our rear pocket we managed to recover enough to get the explanation. It seems that Washburn has taken unto himself a manager. And the aforesaid manager is, of all things, Bert Potts! They have signed a three-year contract. "I know Potts is a guy who will battle just as hard for my interests as he did against them," explained the Bad Man of the Mat. "Besides I was afraid they would toss Bert in to referee my coming match with Ed George at the Crosstown Fashion show." grinned Washburn. "All right now with me if Ed George wants my manager to referee the match why he can have him. How How." No wonder we sent a hurry call for the photographer.

BERT POTTS JACK WASHBURN

Is the sun going to set in a blaze of Crimson, tomorrow night, or is the Blue shell of Yale going to blaze a watery trail ahead of Harvard over the long stretch up the Thames? As on the gridiron you never can tell what is going to happen when John Harvard crosses swords with Eli Yale in one of their traditionary duels. Both John and Eli have a habit of knocking agley the cleverest connected dope of the experts. But if Harvard does beat Yale, tomorrow evening, 90 per cent of the aquatic experts will be on the ropes. All the signs along the trail point to the Blue showing its alene to the Crimson just as the Valentians did to Tech, Penn, Princeton and Cornell. The majority of the experts say that Ed Leader's varsity will pen Charlie Whitesides's crew into defeat and themselves into a duel with the Golden Bears of California, Penchlic victors, in the coming Olympic rowing tryouts on Lake Quinsigamond.

Penn, Syracuse and Cornell all led Harvard home this season. Yale beat both Penn and Cornell. And so on rowing performances and form Yale undoubtedly should win. But the records show that form means nothing when Yale and Harvard clash. The Harvard-Yale underdog on countless occasions, in football and on the water has risen to defeat its ancient rival. Yale only won by the proverbial skin of its teeth from Cornell. A better Cornell crew won on no great margin over Harvard here on the Charles last June. Harvard might have "come" sufficiently to race the Bulldog on even terms from flagfall to finish, tomorrow night. We reiterate that anything can happen when Harvard meets Yale. But we repeat if Harvard does win it will knock the dope of the experts galley west.

Given fair weather and New England next Sunday may assemble its greatest crowd in sports history. The peculiar angle is that the huge throng will not be gathered together in Boston or some big New England city but around the big Rockingham race course in the little hamlet of Salem, N. H. The same signs along the trail that presaged the record Wednesday crowd that attended the Sunday double header at Braves Field a few weeks ago, show that just as huge, perhaps an even larger army of fans, will swarm the Rockingham race course, when Fred Frame and a flock of the world's greatest auto drivers will roll down to the starting line next Sunday.

LEO DIEGEL'S 73 LEADS FIELD IN U. S. OPEN

SARAZEN HAS 74 CARD FOR 2ND PLACE

Fresh Meadow Country Club Flushing, N. Y. June 23 (AP) - Leo Diegel sank a sparkling round of 73, three over par, in a stiff wind today to take the lead for the first 18 holes of the American open golf championship.

Gene Sarazen, the Bob Jones Jr. and Rip Burke of the defending American champion, finished together in Diegel's wake Sarazen with a good 74 and Burke with a scorn that shaky 78.

Each of the champions missed a chance to overhaul Diegel on the incoming nine. Burke's six on the 18th was costly. He and Sarazen both fagged bunkies on the 17th but Gene then approached short and took a five on the par-four home hole.

Diegel wielded his pesky putter like a magic wand. Twice he came up to the cup dead on the par 3 third and left the ball on the lip. Another time he sank a 30-foot putt on the first hole and on the 17th he cards to the rim first of the cup to let a good chance to equal or better his card. Two three-foot putts

Von Elm and Smith Practically Out

Two of the home favorites, George Von Elm (1931 runner-up) and MacDonald Smith, were back from the pace set by Sarazen in the 8:15 a.m. open and were out of the chances with poor scores.

Von Elm finished with 83-81—164 and Smith with 81-83—164.

Tomekichi Mitamura, Japan ace who won 10 on the first hole, finished with an 82.

Joe Burke, Argent, came back with a great exhibition to finish on the home course, getting 38-37—75, with 39-39—78 in between a short beating Diegel.

The South American, after a slow start, came around to attempt a 36-34—70 and jumped into a real contender for first but fell flat in the last three holes.

SHARKEY IS TO BOX SHIRES

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Wuxtra! Wuxtra! Wuxtra!

Big Battle of the Century Braves Field next Wednesday.

Over here—who do you think?

The one and only Art Whataman Shires.

The last time the Braves' first baseman climbed through the ropes he knocked Al Spohrer for a goose. Sister Sharkey, look out for your own.

The Sharkey-Shires battle heads an all star sports program in aid of Mayor James M. Curley's Unemployment Fund. The two greatest welterweights in the world, Jimmy Jacobs and Leo Proudfoot, will box exhibitions with suitable opponents, and Ernie Schaaf, the Wrentham Dynamite, is on will oblige.

Of course the show wouldn't be complete without wrestling. So Jim Browning will tackle Stanley Strowski and Nick Lutze mingle with Bibber McCoy and Bull Martin mix it up with Pat O'Hara. Henri DeGlane world champion, will referee.

Then, of course, there will be the ball game between the Braves and the Red Sox, the personal appearance of Amelia Earhart Putnam, transatlantic flyer, a semi-Olympic tryout 100-meter race for women and vaudeville and musical contributions galore. Included in the entertainment will be the Dolan-Di Percio Bacet in which 40 girls will take part. All roads will lead to Braves Field next Wednesday.

The Daily Dozen

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

It is a good thing certain radio announcers broadcast our early history. We'd be paying a tea tax in addition to all the new ones Congress thought up recently.

Paul Revere would be still riding if fight announcers were at the "mike" in the Old North Church.

And the surrender of Cornwallis would have been a glorious British victory.

In other words, we'd be all balled up. We wouldn't know what happened until we read the papers. And in those days, there were no dailies.

After hearing the broadcast of the fight and then hearing the decision, we were convinced that the judges must have been at a speakeasy during the battle.

Or else didn't know which was Jack and which was Max.

The experts also managed to agree like Republican and Democratic presidential nominees.

If you see two men talking, and they appear to agree, they're not experts, but two other fellows.

But it's too late to protest the verdict. You can't mend a broken.

Sharkey fans insist that Max was simply gobbled up.

The Sailors' Hornpipe is now the national anthem of Britannia.

Secretary Bob Strauss of the commission who gave out the round by round vote, said the commission regarded the fight as a closed incident and no plans were being made for any investigation. He said he knew nothing of a report Jacobs would be called before the commission to explain his charges that Schmeling was rabbit.

Joe Jacobs, Schmeling's manager, refused to make public the names of the state athletic commission for selection of officials he objected to. Neither will up with a formal demand on the boxing authorities to "right a wrong" and execute a return match.

In Chicago, James A. Farley, chairman of the New York State Boxing Commission and presidential campaign manager for Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, expressed amazement at the decision.

No Official Action by the Commission

He declared, however, that he believed the decision was based on the honest and fair-minded judgment of the judges and he demurred to reports that either he or Secretary of State Edward J. Flynn of New York intended taking any action on the decision.

Secretary of State Flynn denied statements attributed to him to the effect that he would recommend repeal of the boxing law to put "an end to the ring racket."

Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago who was a ringside spectator, refused to comment on the fight.

"If I were the Governor of New York, I would kill boxing."

Mayor Miller of Cleveland also teached Schmeling and extended his sympathy, phoning:

"You didn't get that kind of a deal with Stribling in Cleveland last year."

Mayor Walker's sentiments were briefly expressed at the ringside just after the fight. Jim Mulvey of the Walker boxing law said he was astounded at the decision. Interviewed by a German press reporter who was translating opinions of noted persons for shortwave broadcasts to Germany, the mayor said:

"It was rotten."

"Shall I quote you?"

"You bet. It ought to sound great in Germany.

RAOUL WALSH TO RETURN TO FOX STUDIO AS DIRECTOR

Girl About Town

—By ALYCE SIEMENS—

Thought:
An important man died last night.
Tall black letters shriek his name
And his fame
And how important he was.

Another man died last night, I see.
Three timid lines to tell of it,
And show how unimportant he was.

Is God influenced

NARRAGANSETT IS RUM TIDE GATEWAY

By A STAFF REPORTER
(Copyright, 1932, by the Boston Evening American)

The Prohibition brand of "men who go down to the sea in ships" pour their liquor into Boston, Worcester, Springfield, Providence and other New England centers largely through the Narragansett Bay section.

And therefore the liquor mobs have written a colorful chapter around the Rhode Island sector—and are writing it still.

Nowhere are the Coast Guards more active than out around the mouth of Narragansett Bay.

Nowhere are more centers of hosts made.

From Pierces Point and Wood's Hole and Block Island, even from New London, the government vessels blockade the entrance to the bay and surrounding spots.

From the radio station at Narragansett they flash signals relayed to ambush the rumboats slipping in east and west of Beavertail Point of Conanicut Island.

With hundreds of rounds of machine gun bullets they blaze away at the rum-laden craft—and the courts have become an arena for endless battling over their protective activities.

Liquor Tide There Biggest in U. S.

And yet, east of the bay from Sakonnet Point to Westport river is a strip of beach over which a high tide of liquor flows. Over which flows more liquor than any other spot in America, according to reliable reports.

The Coast Guards are nowhere so active. And nowhere does more liquor inward flow. Why?

Mob organization is the answer. One way or another, they know when and where to attempt a landing.

One mob turned to bribery of Coast Guards when the government began the blockading of that section with an augmented fleet of patrol boats.

That collusion was smashed but the leaders escaped jail. Next they turned to hi-jacking loads and caches from the most influential and more successful mobs.

The casualties were heavier than they could bear, and the next step was robbing a government warehouses. Their boldness was rewarded—with arrest and prosecution and they went away for long terms.

But there was no shortage in the supply of liquor. The mobs kept running their smuggled booze in.

"Newport Johnnie" Campbell and his gang parked a stolen truck and a stolen automobile outside a government warehouse in Providence one night, slugged the watchman, sawed the government padlock off the liquor vault and departed with 200 cases of excellent liquor, which soon appeared in Massachusetts cities.

Volpe's Life for Grand Jury's Secrets

This gang, too, received long terms for their boldness—15 years at Atlanta for each. All four members of the gang imposed by Judge Ira L. Letts as he denounced gang methods from the bench.

One day a certain federal special agent with a reputation for "long gun" appeared on the scene but the mobs "ran him ragged."

Complaints and "shakedown" attempts were made by mob leaders and while the agent escaped indictment, the government all but ordered him, and with him a New England prohibition official with headquarters in Boston.

The story of one of these mob leaders caused the indictment of Harry Volpe, a gangster and informant with a colorful history, for trying to extort $5000 through representing himself as a "fixer."

Volpe got advance information on the indictment, which was secret, and we lost touch for some time. His case was delayed further because his attorney was "taken" by the federal men, putting him in a bad light with the courts.

And then one night Volpe was taken for a ride and slain in Providence. The finger of guilt was never put on anybody. Some said his death was brought about by a big mob he had caused to be sent away in the Middle West. Some said it was due to his squealing on a New Jersey beer ring which had sewed up the Rhode Island speakeasies for their product. It was anybody's guess.

To government special agents went the credit for smashing a gang of nine, including a Woonsocket police sergeant, who forced the New Jersey beer ring out of business in the Blackstone Valley. But the mob men gave credit where credit was due—with a bullet or high cal ber through Volpe's brain.

The tough guy Federal south Wes ent the mob ranks, the injected color into that mob area.

There was Alvah Richardson, for several years a deputy sheriff and officer of the Prohibition enforcement organization in Rhode Island

Richardson Case Bares Dry Law Evils

The old Hart farm in Tiverton R. I., near Fall River, was the scene one night of a furious battle between Herbert Cavara and five followers against a band of 13 hi-jackers in defense of liquor valued at $62,000.

"Johnny" Campbell and eight others went to trial in the state courts as a result, and Richardson, appearing as a defense witness for Campbell, was grilled about his alleged connection with Campbell and about an attempt to shake down two Newport businessmen who owned a cache of $18,000 worth of liquor.

Richardson denied the allegations but subsequently was indicted for actually taking part in the Tiverton episode, not as a government raider but as a hijacker and conspirator. He demand d t ial in the Federal court, which was granted. The state dropped the case and Richardson was found not guilty by a directed verdict.

Later he was indicted with bring ing about the arrest of Campbell and others for robbing the government warehouse. After their conviction Richardson was assigned to take them to the Atlanta Federal penitentiary. He got them liquor on which they got drunk en route. He was to go, it was taken care of. Richardson was also accused of accepted an automobile from a law violator. On these grounds Director Woodcock "fired" him.

Meanwhile political war was brewing over the prosecution of another influential mob leader. A federal judge, with a record for fairness and impartiality, denounced politics in the administration of justice. And judge and chief prosecutor are today at odds.

That's Prohibition on which the mob system rests.

AMERICANS ABROAD AND JOKING AT HOME

By GILBERT SELDES

EVERY SPRING AND SUMMER the manners (bad manners) of Americans abroad become an acute embarrassment—to other Americans abroad, particularly to those who never come home. Natives of foreign countries show themselves rather indulgent; they may think us louder and funnier than need be, but they don't mind very much. Most of the Frenchmen and Germans who see Americans at their worst, make a comfortable living off Americans, partially because they are at their worst. And they wisely agree that if they are setting up luxurious bars (and overcharging four times for champagne because it is after midnight) they can only hope that visitors will get obnoxiously drunk and not scrutinize the bill too carefully. And even in quiet resorts, when jewels and silks and perfumes are specially prized for American visitors the sellers are not likely to quarrel with a little lack of perfection in manners.

GILBERT SELDES

Those Awful Tourists

The Americans who habitually go abroad or permanently live abroad are different. I can quite see why they wince at certain loud voices certain quarrels with overburdened porters, and the not uncertain assertions that the City Hall (in New York, Boston or any of the other joke towns like Keokuk) is a nobler edifice than the cathedral at Chartres. Americans who want to or have to live abroad take on protective coloration; they wish to have all the advantages of natives and none of the disabilities of visitors. They want not to be complimented on their accent, because they want their accent to pass unnoticed. They do not want to be overcharged in accordance with the outworn maxim that every American is a millionaire. They spend nine months a year bringing forth the illusion of themselves as perfect English or perfect French ladies and gentlemen, and along comes a tourist!

Travel's a Holiday

Still, a little sense might be useful. Americans abroad are either the same as they are at home or worse, only a few, timid ones, hardly worthy of the name of Americans are better. They become more agreeable when they set their active foot on foreign shores because of the contrast and because the moment we go out of our own province we tend to exaggerate our characteristics. We travel or abroad or twang a little to excess, to assert ourselves. (Down South you are not nearly as aware of the "mammy-tone" as you are up North.)

Our critics fail to allow for the prime fact of all travel abroad that it is a holiday. The six or seven days between the harbor of New York and the shoreline of Europe are a week in elapsed time but a good 15 years in emotional time. We revert to childhood, which is the privilege of the rich, and suddenly free from routine which has held us a year; we break out because we have broken through. It isn't surprising that we drink too much and talk too much. We do it when we move from the city to the mountains or the sea. If we're lucky enough to hit Europe the effect is multiplied a hundred times.

Jokes in K

The joke towns of America used to run to the letter K. Keokuk and Kalamazoo with concealed K-sounds a close second. Yonkers and Dubuque. There may be a phonetic reason, certainly no one has ever explained the difference between these places and other cities and suburbs of the same size.

It had never occurred to me that the inhabitants of such cities willingly accepted the joke until I read an advertisement, in a weekly of liberal tendencies, which ran:

"If any person (or any two people) is silly has to be in Philadelphia for the summer, it might help to have a large, cool studio room (bath and shower), big desk, big chair, big bed, big couch, outside entrance, kitchenette privileges. The holder of the adjoining (though not connecting) apartment is a young woman—a writer."

Concluded 1932.

"Really . . . Might?"

It all sounds too heavenly, but I still murmur against "really has to be" and "it might help." That isn't civic pride and that won't bring any tenants. The same journal, the same page, has another advertisement, inserted by a talented American poet now living abroad. He says he wants to rent "his picturesque 17th century house in old-world town of Rye, Sussex. Incidentally, so you may know what you can get in England, the details include "five bedrooms, three living rooms large studio, useful library, 2000 volumes, piano, small garden, one mile from sea." And the price is $60 a month if you take it by the year, or $70 if you can only stay six months. But the main thing is that pride is a better ad writer than humility.

MODERATE RISE IS REGISTERED IN WALL ST.

A better one in bonds and commodities stiffened the stock market, despite the drag of further early heaviness in American Telephone, U. S. Steel preferred and American Can.

Steel preferred equalled its bear market low while Can went fractionally under its record low as dividend uncertainties induced fresh selling.

OILS AWAIT DECISION

Utilities ignored the adverse dividend action by Electric Power & Light. Oils marked time awaiting the decision on California crude prices today.

Rails tended fractionally lower most of the time while specialties like Eastman Kodak, Allied Chemical and Air Reduction hovered in a narrow range around last Friday's close.

Wheat, cotton and sugar all showed gains while bonds worked higher, ignoring a heavy issue in government obligations. The dollar was firm.

There were a few strong spots visible as Auburn scored a maximum early gain of more than 3 points, Short covering helped Air Threshing, stimulated by the better action of wheat. American Tobacco B climbed an extremely thin market and was up sharply on a few transactions. B. M. T. continued to improve with the dividend out of the way.

BONDS HOLD FIRM

The bond market showed mildly firming tendencies today although trading, as a whole, was quiet and there were few important price changes.

President Hoover's drastic proposal for international disarmament and forthcoming quarterly reports of large corporations, the war debts and reparations conference at Lausanne was considered among the more important factors influencing market conditions.

Interest was also expressed in the endorsement of a resolution by the national convention of insurance commissioners at Chicago recommending that fire and casualty companies be permitted to value their well-secured bond holdings on an amortized basis of the average valuation plan now generally in use.

United States government loans were not particularly affected by the recent turn-about of the gold movement. For five out of the last six business days net gains in gold stocks were reported by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. Liberties and Treasuries were fairly active in today's session, but they followed a narrow price range.

A number of railroads showed moderate gains. The heaviest trading was in Frisco bonds, which advanced a point or more. American Telephone improved moderately, but Shell Union Oil 5s slumped around 8 points.

$5000 Reward for Rumor Convictions

St. Paul, Minn., June 23—Advertisements appeared this week in St. Paul newspapers, as follows:

$5000 REWARD

"For information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons, spreading false and malicious rumors about the First National Bank of St. Paul. Information should be communicated to United States Secret Service, Room 327, Federal Building, Telephone Cedar 9215. Identity of Informants will be kept strictly confidential."

Close Undecided in London Market

London, June 23 (AP)—Investment and industrial issues were the main activity today on the stock exchange due to continued buying. Argentine rails were better on favorable local news while foreign issues eased. Home rails were weak following the cut in dividend by one of the large companies. The close was undecided.

General Vending Corp.

Independent bondholders' committee has been formed for General Vending Corp. 6 per cent 10 year secured sinking fund gold debentures.

Gangsters have threatened Howard Hughes, but Hollywood's youngest producer, quiet, half Oriental as he is, can't be scared off that easily. Others have tried and failed in the production of "Scarface"—which is likely to tear the lid off the underworld.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWERS

Congressman Frisby to Discard Vest to Get Nudists' Vote.

Editor's Note—The national political situation is briefly thus: Nudists everywhere are willing to support Congressman Frisby for the presidential nomination. While he appreciates the chance to become leader of the Nudists, Mr. Frisby is fearful that he will annoy the people who are opposed to nudism. Today he has issued a hand bill to clarify the confusion. Here's the statement, follows:

"Dear one and all! I am not mad at anybody. I am simply marking time. Nudists everywhere demand that I be their leader. I am always willing to lead, and care not a snap of my finger for danger, but if I am to be the friend of all humanity, I want all humanity to adopt nudism before I declare myself. In other words, I want to promote nudism for the nudists, and at the same time advocate plenty of clothing for the others. At present I will go without my vest, to show my loyalty to the nudists. At the same time I will wear both belt and suspenders to indicate I am conservative. Yours for safe and sane nudism, plenty of sunshine and protection against sudden changes of weather.

"Horace Walpole Frisby."

RADIO RINGSIDE CHAMP!

Coe Wins Fight Broadcast Crown

By N. F. T.

Hail the new Heavyweight Champion of boxing announcers! Charles Francis Coe scored an impressive network knockout Tuesday night.

AUTHORITIES AGREE

In superb verbal condition, Coe uttered effective uppercuts, time after time, also landing smashing short right words in the microphone. Foremost Hub Radio writers are unanimous in approving the decision awarded by listening judges. Both boys tipped the beam around 185 pounds.

* * *

John Brennan says: "Coe packs a terrific punch in both hooks. His dazzling speed indicated superior phrase generalship. It seemed as though Graham might have been trained too fine."

Howard Fitzpatrick says: "Coe displayed color and class all the way—real champion."

KNEW IT ALL ALONG

As for that "solyum" here, there never was any doubt but what that Coe vocabulary would prove too rugged for the veiled Graham to overcome. Accurately timed adjectives were scored repeatedly and with marked effect from the opening round. This "Socker" Coe should rate as the most popular fight talk fan since Major Andrew White.

* * *

Crowds turning out for twice weekly periods by Col. Stoopnagle and Bud now make it necessary to rope off studio space for the pair at CBS sound hall headquarters in New York.

HEART HUNTING

Sweet-singing Tito Guizar calls his program tomorrow night (WNAC) at 9:30 "To the Ladies." No doubt the listening fair sex will thrill at his tenoring of "Sidney," a native Mexican love song feature.

* * *

Tomorrow evening also brings a new drama series called "Royal Romance" through WEEI, between 9 and 9:30, with a cast of Yankee Network Players, under Fred Allen Bishop and Hatch. The sketches depict historic love affairs of European crowned heads who ruled during previous centuries.

Gossip About People You Know

STATE HOUSE TIPSTERS

Wednesdays, council days at the State House, continue to see crowded ante rooms at the governor's office. While a good many of those present are office seekers, there is always a fair sprinkling of partisans who run to the telephones when the list of appointments is made known.

EDWARD, NOT TOM

Former Rep. "Tom" Gibiin of Jamaica Plain claims the credit for the picking of Gov. Ely to make the campaign speech for former Gov. "Al" Smith at the convention. Gibiin said he suggested the governor when the honor was in doubt. Two days later, he said, the selection was made. In yesterday's American mention was made of Mr. Gibiin's son, Tom, being appointed sergeant-at-arms at the Democratic national convention in Chicago. The paper regrets the typographical mistake of "Tom" for "Edward," another son of Mr. Gibiin's. Tom was killed in the World War.

MURPHY CANDIDATE

Former Election Commissioner "Eddie" Murphy, of Charlestown, today announced his candidacy for Congress. "Eddie" has been active in politics for the past 25 years. He plans an aggressive campaign.

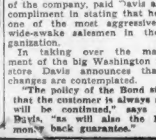
BIGGER FISH

Patrolman "Jimmie" Halligan, guardian of the law at Mayor Curley's office in City Hall, will have a new collection of fish stories when he returns from his annual vacation two weeks hence. "Jimmy" will spend his time fishing.

DAVIS MANAGER OF BOND STORE

Announcement is made by the Bond Clothing Company, Inc., of the appointment of Herbert Davis as manager of the store at 518 Washington street. This is one of the largest in the Bond chain of 30 stores.

Davis has been connected with the Bond Washington street store for eight years, the last six months as assistant manager. He has a large following and a host of friends throughout Boston and



HERBERT DAVIS

New England. His long experience in the business and wide acquaintance placed him at the top among clothing salesmen.

Davis was born in Boston and he has always lived here. At a dinner tendered him by the employes, Reynold Goodman, vice-president of the company, said "we're high in compliment in stating that he was one of the most aggressive and wide-awake salesmen in the organization.

In taking over the management of the big Washington street store Davis announces that no changes are contemplated.

"The policy at the Bond stores that the customer is always right will be continued," says Mr. Davis, "as will also the Bond money back guarantee."

Underworld Overlords Intimidate Courts

Chicago has just witnessed a case of intimidation of the courts and the officers of the law so startling as to be almost unbelievable.

Every man who has faith in his country and its future should give it his rivested attention. It is an incident of fearful import. It shows, as nothing hitherto has shown, the DEATH GRAPPLE IN WHICH CRIME NOW HOLDS AMERICAN LIFE.

A bank was held up in a suburb of Chicago on December 6th, 1930. Six bandits, armed with machine guns, terrorized the employes and made off with $60,000. The leader of the robbers was identified by bank employes. His trial resulted in a jury's disagreement. Held for retrial, the prosecution was brought to a termination on Monday by a motion of the Cook County prosecutor for a dismissal of the charge.

The defendant is one of several candidates for leadership in the beer trade on the South Side of Chicago. He is a well-known hoodlum and is listed as a "PUBLIC ENEMY," by the Chicago Crime Commission.

The State of Illinois stated in open court that the three bank officials, who have been under guard for their protection at a downtown hotel in Chicago, had received gangster threats warning them against confirming their identification of the accused and threatening violent reprisals against all concerned in the case if it were not dropped.

"I do not believe the State's Attorney should stand here," said the court, "and confess he is not big enough to keep these men protected"—referring to the three bank officials who have been under police protection until they could give their testimony for the State.

"Not when faced with a machine gun, Your Honor," replied the Prosecuting Attorney.

The judge signed the order dismissing the charge of bank robbery, saying the State could take the responsibility. He was apparently unmindful of his own.

A news account of this amazing incident says:

"The gangster, grinning widely, walked from the room free."

Here is a story of law defiance that is without parallel. It must make every he man in America hang his head in shame.

Crime no longer apparently opposes the forces of law and order with criminal furtiveness. IT HAS TAKEN POSSESSION OF THE SEATS OF JUSTICE. It has superseded the District Attorney of Cook County.

Its demand for immunity is listened to by the court and ACCEPTED as the basis of a ruling discharging the defendant without trial for his crime.

This incident certainly marks the lowest point to which any society can fall. If it is tolerated, if it is passed over without a passionate outburst by all good men, EVERYWHERE—the conditions which give rise to the incident are not peculiar to a single city—THEN THERE IS NO HOPE FOR AMERICAN SOCIETY.

TODAY IT STANDS DISHONORED AND DISGRACED—SUCCESSFULLY DEFIED—ITS COURTS AND PROSECUTORS ROUTED BY A GANG-DEFENDED BEER-RUNNER.

Faster Rail Service Is the Answer to Auto Menace

People have gone from steel rails to balloon tires. There are now 236,000 passenger cars coming into Boston daily, bringing 450,000 people. Most of them are commuters who formerly used the Elevated and the railroads.

Statistically, this is very interesting. But behind the figures is a grave problem. The railroads must continue for many years to be the backbone of transportation. Nor can Boston and its populous suburbs get along without tunnel rapid transit. Moreover, the people of the Metropolitan District have a stake in the Elevated, guaranteeing the dividends for 28 years under the public control act.

Our rail systems can not accept this competition without a contest. We could not afford to let them do so.

Auto traffic competition must be met by improved rail service. The railroads entering Boston ought to be electrified, driving the circuit trains at express speed. The Elevated rapid tunnel system must be extended. The Huntington Avenue extension will be an improvement, but it is only a stopgap. Newton, Brighton, Arlington, Belmont, Somerville and the other environs must be supplied in the future with rapid tunnel service which the commuters could not afford not to patronize.

The only branch of the Elevated which has shown increased traffic is the motor-bus system, which is new and which is convenient to the public's needs. Railways can't keep pace with demands by relying upon the agencies of the past. Rapid transit tunnels and railroad electrification are the goals to which they must set themselves.

She Created Day Nursery

One of our new schools is to be named in honor of Sophia W. Ripley. Unless you are an intellectual liberal or omnivorous reader, you probably don't know who she was and why she collected fame. It is now more than sixty years since she and her husband established Brook Farm, the social experiment in West Roxbury that commanded the interest of the world.

Emerson, Thoreau, Bronson Alcott, Charles A. Dana and Nathaniel Hawthorne, who immortalized Brook Farm in his novel, Blithedale, were among its distinguished devotees. They thought they could live in Utopian harmony based on pure Socialism. They learned by cold experience that individual ability and industry must have a sway in this exacting world of ours.

The Brook Farm experiment collapsed. But Mrs. Ripley had one permanent creation to her credit and it is for this she is now to be honored after the lapse of sixty years. She devised the day nursery for children. And paeans of deep praise should be sung to her memory, at least by the men and women who would have grown to adult life handicapped by physical infirmities from youth had it not been for the beneficent ministrations of the day nursery.

New York Day by Day

On the Beach

NEW YORK, June 23—The world in quick recession has beached a vast army of ladies-for-sale. As prodigals of love and thriftless of gold they were airily irresponsible and attuned to startling grandeur. Now there is no way to turn. They have no cashably honest talent and gentlemen friends are stony.

During the past three crumbling years they drifted from de luxe apartments to cheap hotels, walk-up flats and finally shabby rooming houses. Theirs was a prosperity depending entirely upon a rising market. No class is so benefited by life's come easy, go easy motif.

Hundreds, turning to love balm suits and other cagey chantage, find shysters now ask enormous advances, knowing defendants are not able to pay. With assets mostly jewels, they find, too, a deplorable market for such baubles. Many pawn shops are now refusing pledges.

In 1929, a sociological survey revealed some 20,000 nesting in apartments renting at $10,00 a year and more. They had chauffeured cars, charge accounts and 'french maids. Their tragedy in the business of loving was largely in their isolation.

The leisure hours were spent largely in beauty parlors—fighting the horror of the indelible imprint of years. One of the suicide notes left by a member of the guild summed up their collective plight with: "I'm tired of playing hide and seek with my conscience."

The theatrical collapse brings odd shifts. Two featured dancers of musical comedy are teamed in a sister act in a dollar dinner cabaret. An $800 a week comedian of five years ago is a disguised comic in continuous burlesque. A capable actress of middle years is a governess to three children in a Long Island home and a master of ceremony is a cashier in an upper Broadway restaurant.

* * *

Upper Riverside Drive in the cool of the summer evening has the manner of the maple-lined residential street in a small town. Life floats along like a smoke-ring. Everybody seems freshly dressed to sit on the stone parapet and the benches. Young lovers are in a close huddle. old men nod and women knit. Children roll hoops, ride bicycles and dogs yip in frolic. It's difficult to imagine that a few blocks from where the Hudson idles down to the sea is the terrifying energy of Broadway.

* * *

And on a bench near Inspiration Point a man reading suddenly grew taut and took a lightning look over his shoulder. In a confused semi-apology because we saw it, he said: "This ghost story got me." It recalls Christopher Morley's first reading of Conrad's "The Nigger of the Narcissus." He was on a commutation train absorbing the description of a monstrous wave rolling toward a ship. The train car seemed to go up on end and in sudden panic, he dropped his book, clutched at a neighbor, crying: "God, she's going over."

Not so startling—but as well remembered—was a reading coincidence during a sleepless night at a tiny jerrybuilt wayside inn on a motor trip through Brittany. Trying vainly to sleep all night, toward dawn I returned to a mystery novel dropped at the bedside. In the proposed murder of a hermit miser in a forest glade an advancing guard was to imitate the morning roundelay of a rooster that all was clear. In the passage describing the wait, an alert champion of daylight immediately outside my window let go a full throated crow, thereby touching off a full throated yelp that was a honey.

It was at this inn, incidentally, that I made a valiant resolve to increase my avoirdupois. Early breakfasters al fresco were discussing the only other guests—my wife and me. Said one: "He looks as though he might be a salesman for sick-room supplies." Since then I've added 22 pounds, too, which certainly made suckers out of them.

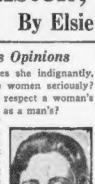
Women's Opinions

"WHY," writes she indignantly, "don't men take women seriously? Why don't they respect a woman's opinion as much as a man's?



Elsie Robinson

"There's my husband, now. He is wonderful to me in most ways. He always boasts about what a fine housekeeper I am. But if I express an opinion about anything outside of the home, he treats me as if I were a child. Sometimes he tells me outright that I don't know what I'm talking about. Yet he will listen respectfully to any man.

"Now, Miss Robinson, I don't claim to be a highbrow. I am just an average American wife. But I had a good high school education, and I worked in an office and made my own living for three years before I married. Then why shouldn't my husband respect my opinion?"

Why don't men take women seriously?

Perhaps because women take themselves too seriously—have too few interests outside themselves.

Listen to women talking—any group of women, talking anywhere. What are they talking about?

PERSONAL MATTERS.

Their feelings, likes and dislikes. Their clothes. Their health. Their sweethearts or husbands. Their homes.

Listen in on women anywhere and, with the exception of small professional or business groups, you will find them discussing these subjects. Interesting topics. All important. But all PERSONAL. Each topic revolving in a narrow circle around the woman herself. Never getting away from the woman herself.

Introduce an IMPERSONAL subject and what happens? It is either disregarded, yawned off, or turned into personal channels. The big public problem is interesting only insofar as it immediately affects Bessie and Rose and their intimate circle of family or friends.

Now listen to men—any group of men anywhere. What are they talking about?

IMPERSONAL MATTERS.

Politics. Sports. Shop talk. Automobiles. Unemployment. The six hour day.

Men, in crowds, talk about things outside themselves. Not necessarily deep talk nor smart talk. Not, perhaps, any more intelligent talk than the talk between women, but more IMPERSONAL talk. Wider talk.

Talk that reaches out into the life of the world, that looks at things from the world angle. Opinions based on something bigger than personal prejudices.

Women think about things PERSONALLY; base their opinions on personal experience, sentiment or prejudice.

Men think about things IMPERSONALLY; base their opinions on mass experience, mass prejudice.

There's the difference between woman opinion and man opinion; between the way a woman uses her brains and the way a man uses his brains.

THE BRAINS MAY BE EQUALLY GOOD, BUT IS THE OPINION EQUALLY VALUABLE?

Which opinion would YOU seek if YOU were in need of advice—the opinion of a woman or a man?

Just Folks

F. K. R.

He loved this world and all his friends,
Rejoiced in sky and stream
And followed to their farthest ends
The bypaths of his dream.
No task he thought too much to do
For those he loved, whose need he knew.

It was his way to worship God
By being always kind.
Whatever little lane he trod,
Some work for Him he'd find.
A crushed flower or a wounded bird
Would leave his nature deeply stirred.

He loved the smell of earth; young grass,
A wood fire's pungent smoke.
In quiet hours which comrades pass
Together, oft he spoke
Of stars and trees and canyon rim
As though they were a part of him.

And now God has him back again—
This gentle soul who dared
To sense the sufferings of men
And live as though he cared.
And He will find, where all is known,
The scars of heartaches not his own.

Wadsworth Interprets the Convention

By Claude G. Bowers

FORMER SENATOR WADSWORTH of New York interprets the action of the Republican Convention on prohibition as a manifestation of the imperialistic trend in government in this country. By this he means a disposition, more and more, to centralize power in Washington.

This is the danger foreseen by the enemies of the Federalists a hundred and fifty years ago; and it was because of this danger that Jefferson and Madison organized their party of opposition.

But it is scarcely true that the convention was disposed to adopt the imperialistic or centralized plan which went into the platform. But for the pressure brought to bear by Mr. Hoover and his agents and official retainers among the delegates, a more decentralizing plank would have been adopted.

There were two reasons for the imperialistic trend of the convention. One was that it was bound to nominate as its leader a man who temperamentally is an imperialist. Mr. Hoover really believes in centralization and the concentration of power in the Executive, in the national capital. Instinctively he is an autocrat. Without possessing the qualities of a dictator he would like to be one.

But notwithstanding this fact, the convention still would have refused to bow to his dictation but for the strength he had in the army of Federal office-holders among the delegates.

Mr. Hoover Is Different

Twenty-eight years ago, when Roosevelt was President and seeking renomination in the convention of 1904, he set himself four-square against Federal office-holders going as delegates to the party pow-wow. It was a fine gesture, a sincere one, and there was justice in it. Many years later Calvin Coolidge expressed his disapproval of dominating conventions through men who are dependents of the President.

But Mr. Hoover is different. He thinks in terms of imperialism and autocracy. He wanted as many retainers in the convention as could possibly be packed in. He got them in. And they were the determining factor in the framing of the platform and in the renomination of Mr. Curtis for second place on the ticket.

This has come to be a menace and something of a scandal. With the expansion of Federal activities into almost all the affairs of men, the army of Federal office-holders has increased alarmingly. It is estimated that today one man in ten in this country holds some Federal job.

If public opinion and the law permits this vast army to mobilize for common purposes in politics under the dictation of the appointing power, it will only be a matter of time until we have an autocracy of the most dangerous sort. In the case of a strongly dominant party it would go a long way toward perpetuating a regime in power.

No Free Will at the Convention

I do not know to what extent this scandal can be ended by law; it can be ended by a protesting public sentiment; and should be ended by the political parties.

Otherwise it will be impossible to reflect the free will of a party in a convention. There was no free will last week in Chicago. The convention moved under the Cossacks' whips. It was a bulldozed convention.

But for that, Mr. Curtis would not have been renominated—and should not have been. Personally popular, in no way offensive, no one would suggest that he possesses the qualities for the Presidency in a crisis.

In equipment he is no Elihu Root. In normal times he would be a safe Vice-President; for certainly he merely presides over the Senate and eats his way through his term. But the next four years will be critical, and Mr. Curtis will be in his seventies when the next Administration begins.

That was the reason, reflecting in no way upon Mr. Curtis personally, that the sentiment of the convention was against his renomination.

But Mr. Hoover and his corps of office-holders in the convention, tremblingly doing the bidding of Ogden Mills, literally were forced to renominate Curtis.

Why Curtis Was Named

There were two reasons for Mr. Hoover's dictation of the renomination of his running mate—and thereon hangs a tale. Some months ago, Mr. Curtis was more than dubious about the re-election of the national ticket. In conversation with some political friends he avowed his skepticism and announced his intention of making a survey in Kansas with the view to seeking the Senatorial nomination should he find the prospects brighter there. He made the survey.

Just what he found we do not know. About this time he w. - given assurances in Administration circles of securing a renomination.

But he himself in conversation with a correspondent, during the time of the rising tide against his renomination in the convention, offered another explanation. Here again prohibition enters. He thought the opposition was due to the fact that he is bone dry, an ardent prohibitionist who stands four-square for the 18th Amendment and all its fruits.

That unquestionably entered into the explanation of the opposition.

It also enters into the explanation of the grim determination of Mr. Hoover and the Federal officers' corps in the convention that he should be named again.

A Welcome Innovation

But the Republican Convention is now over. There is more bitter resentment than enthusiasm over the results.

Now the public mind is turning to the Democratic Convention which will be a free spirited, with the spirit of individualism and independence there will be no compromising as to split the party into segments and give Mr. Hoover a fighting chance is still on the lap of the gods.

Just now the leaders appear to be concentrating on the platform in the hope of making it no longer than a thousand words. This would be a welcome innovation. The franker it is, the shorter it will be. It requires many words to confuse the public mind. Since a platform should present policies and principles and not statutes, the party's position on every question can be condensed into a clear strong paragraph. It is in the effort to straddle and confuse that a platform lengthens.

This year the issues go to the fundamentals of government. These fundamentals were long since set forth by Jefferson. It is now conceded by Nicholas Murray Butler that the preservation of our institutions demand a return to Jeffersonian principles. Why not a brief restatement of these principles with a sharp application to the outstanding questions of the hour?

Otherwise It Was a Snap

Does it pay to be versatile? Mrs. Agnes Kerr, janitress at the Brooklawn School in New Jersey, says so.

Her functions were to sweep and scrub out the building. She also cleaned windows, washed ink over the blackboards and knocked the chalk powder out of the dusters.

She filled inkwells, manicured the pens, watered the geraniums on the sill, and performed all other duties on the fringe of pedagogy. Between times she fired the boilers, swinging the rake and shovel with the vigor of a transatlantic stoker.

To salvage odd moments, she shoved a Juggernaut of a lawnmower over ten acres of lawn, weeded the path and pruned trees. This week Brooklawn is casting about for a new janitress equally versatile, for Mrs. [illegible] Kerr suddenly quit. Perhaps she objected to teaching [illegible] Greek and doubling in algebra.
